[illegible]

Dear Sue,

Can you believe this year is over? I can't, it seems like I have known everyone for years. Especially you we have become so close and I am really glad. You are such a nice person (especially since you drive us to so many places) you have helped me cope with a lot (namely well we won't mention names). Thanks a lot for everything! Remember if you need help with anything give me a call or drop by. I'll have to show you where I live. And my number is not long distance. Keep in touch over the summer.

forget Howard Johnson's, Rad. Beach Parties or me!

Dear Sue,

How's it goin! I'm so glad we became good friends this year! You're really a great person! I wish you could've tried out for cheerleader! You probably would've made it! Don't worry about school next year it will be OK! Take me to the ala playa sometime! No, only if you want to! Haha! Have a spasmodic summer!

Love ya a lots and Friends forever!

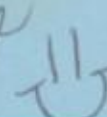

83' RULES!!

Love
Jane!

Dear Sue,

Hi! How are you doin'? That's good. I'm glad we're friends. This is the first year really that we've really talked to each other. Freshman year I didn't even know who you were. You're really nice and very pretty also. You should be a model, I know you already are. You're so lucky to have thousands of guys and half of them are on the waiting list. Why don't you send them to me? Haha. The untouchable (oops, I spelled it wrong) we won't say anything tho' Susan, will we? I'll see you at the beach, I'm sure and we'll all probably go out a couple of times during the summer. And all go to Boston. Just think, the year's over! We only have one week and then we're really JUNIORS. Upperclassmen finally. It's seems like just yesterday we were lil' ol' freshmen. Well, good luck with all your guys.

1981 TROUBADOUR

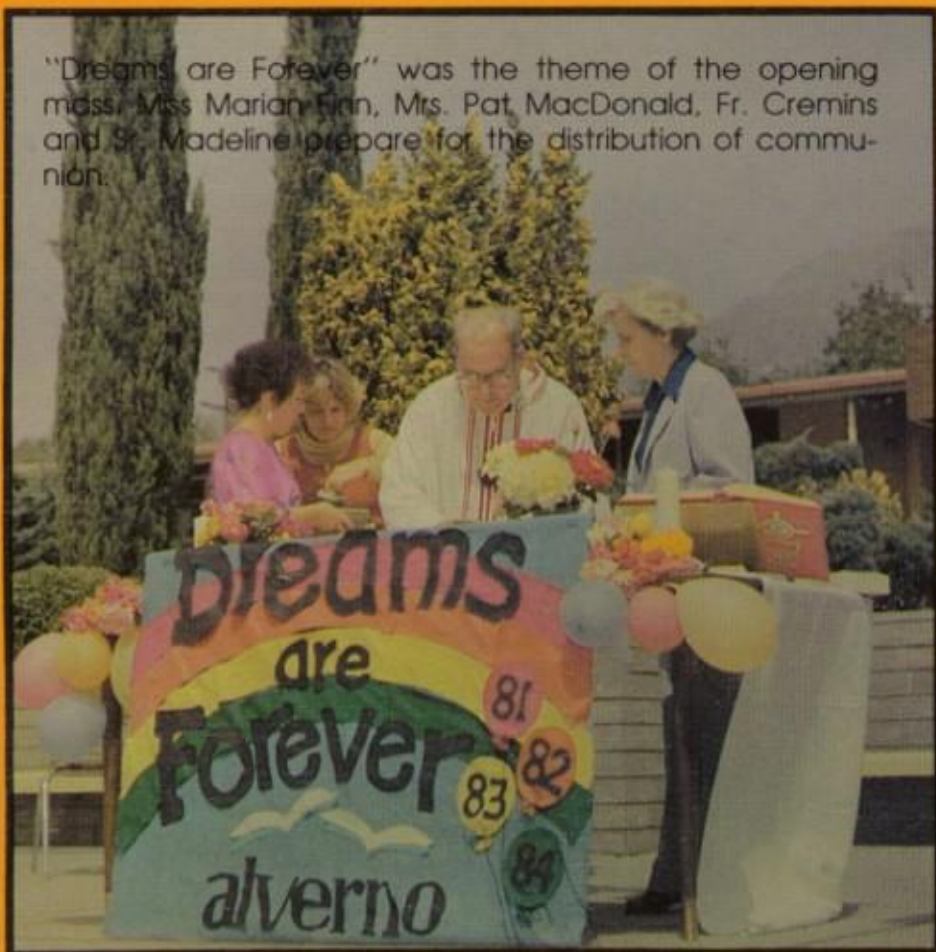

Volume 18
Alverno High School
200 N. Michillinda Ave.
Sierra Madre, CA. 91024

▲ An excited student body shows its enthusiasm as the winners of the 20th Anniversary skit competition are announced. The Senior Class took the prize of "BEST OVER-ALL SKIT" while the faculty took "WORST OVER-ALL SKIT."

One . . . Singular Sensation

"Dreams are Forever" was the theme of the opening mass. Miss Marian Finn, Mrs. Pat MacDonald, Fr. Cremins and Sr. Madeline prepare for the distribution of communion.

Sensational! 1980-81 was One Singular Sensation. It was not the school, but the people in the school who created such a year.

The relaxed atmosphere at Alverno let each individual "do her own thing". Throughout the year, students could be found wearing Mickey Mouse glasses, shouting, "Re-elect President Lincoln!" and coming to school in pajamas.

There was more to Alverno than routine classes. It offered much inspiration in masses, counseling, and the ability to talk to teachers on a one-to-one level.

During the school year, it was clearly evident that there was a sense of unity among the students. One junior summed it up when she stated that, "each student held her own individuality, and also had a feeling of belonging to the student body."

▲ Kelly McFaul passes the birthday flame to Jenny Tweddle. Candles were one of the symbols used to celebrate Alverno's 20th.

◆ Teresa Cintron displays her excitement as she wins the office of Senior Class Vice-President as an unopposed candidate.

One . . . Moving Inspiration

Cheering! Sharing! Motivation! All were part of a diverse student body expressing feelings and spirit. Students were receptive of ideas and enjoyed working together to produce project assemblies such as the political campaign. The new joint Alverno-La Salle Halloween party with the chilling haunted house had a great attendance. New classes inspired students to explore varied facets of their studies. Cheerleaders made students very enthusiastic before and during games, helping the teams feel supported.

Student life, academics and athletics were all part of a Moving Inspiration that enriched the student body. The singular success was the unity of students and faculty in participation and organization of events. Individual talents and uniqueness encouraged a sensational year. ✂

▲ "Remember the day . . ." was the theme of the school's birthday mass, set on the lower lawns.

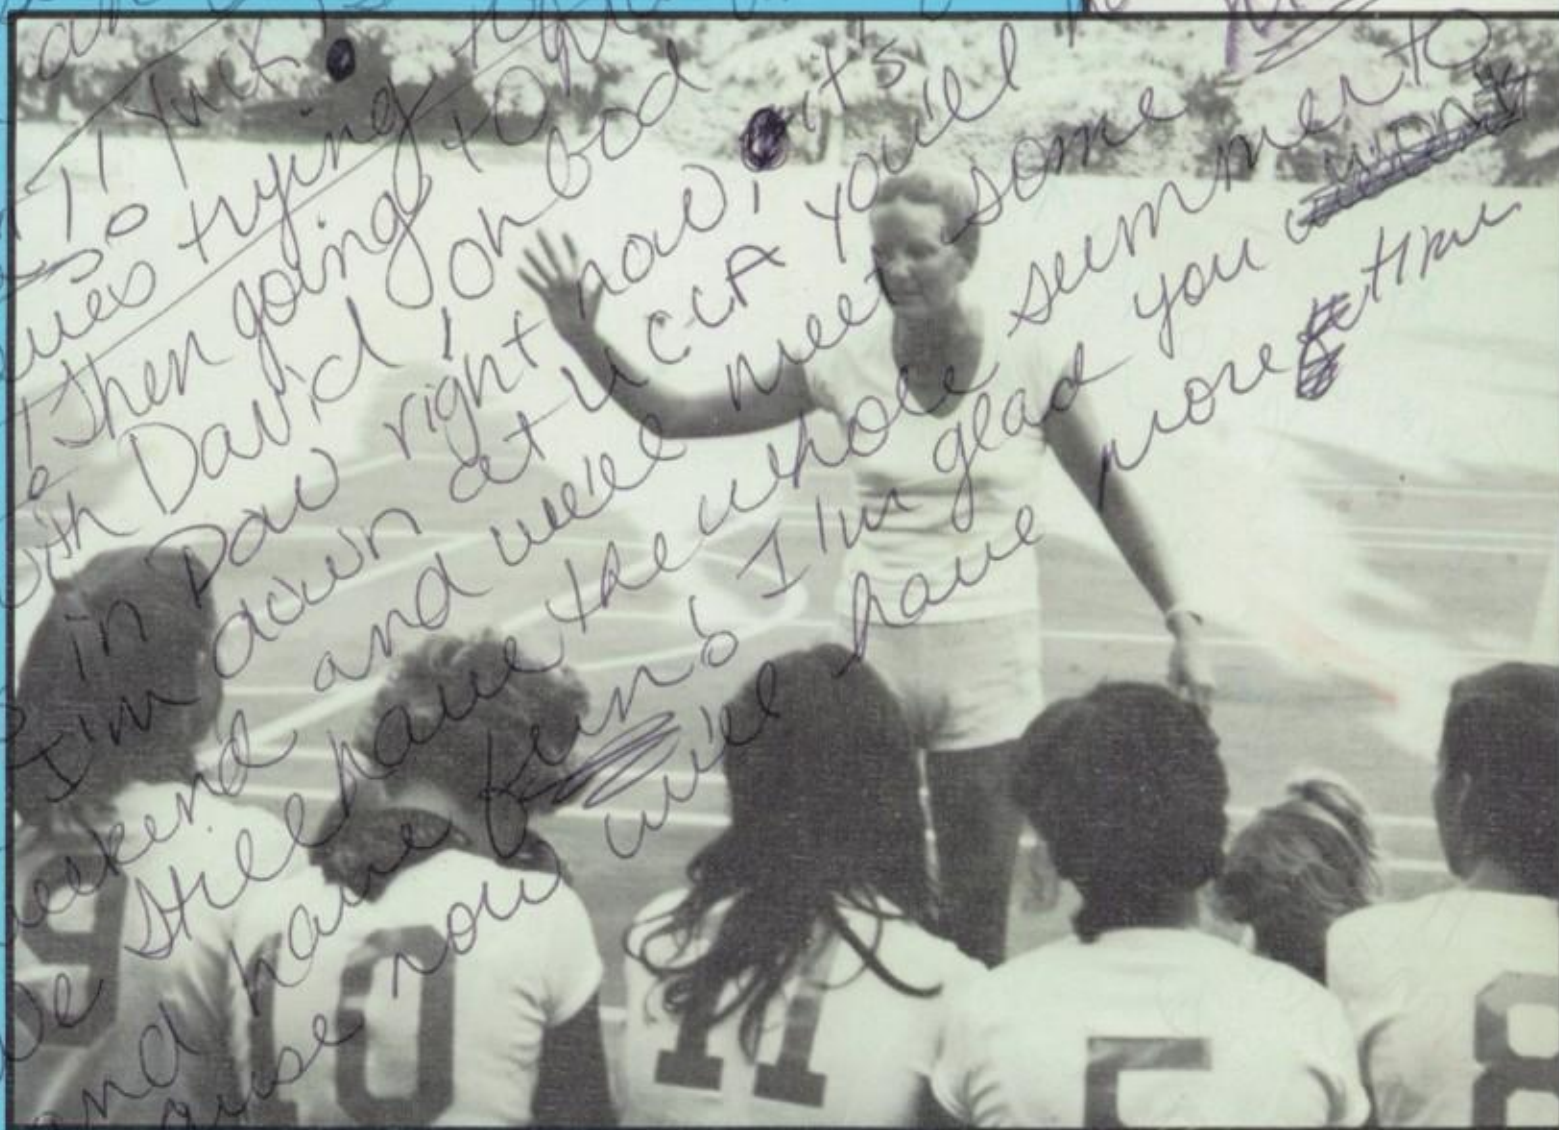

▲ Cheryl Lindsey adds the final touch before the 20th anniversary mass begins.

Kris Vanderhaar, Monica Auzenne, Apple Daza, and Elena Cazares increase school spirit during a mini-pep rally. The cheerleaders won a spirit trophy at a summer workshop.

Jill Redmond locks her moped as she arrives at school. Not many girls took advantage of this economical form of transportation.

One . . . Individual Vibration

The single most important element of Alverno was, of course, the students. Each individual set her goals, and throughout the year strived to meet them. Some girls found their interests in activities at school, staying until all hours on some afternoons. Others, involved in outside activities, found it more important to flee from school grounds exactly at 2:20. Whatever the case, each girl was unique and contributed to the diversity of the student body.

In each of the four classes, there was a clear sense of unity. The catalyst of this unity was each individual's pride in herself. During the year, the classes came together in order to pull off fund raisers, dances, skits and luncheons. Each class, each group of friends, each person proved to be One Individual Vibration.

◆ Sophomore Kathy Tulleners admires her newly decorated locker. Each morning she was greeted by pictures of Eric Heiden and Greg Evigan.

It would be a zillion trillion!

One . . . Winning Combination

In its sense of pride and self-respect, Alverno has stood united. United as a school, united in the four classes, and united on a one-to-one level among friends.

Clubs and teams provided a chance for students with common interests and abilities to unify in order to share them. From skiing to softball, from volleyball to journalism, students showed that their interests lay not only in Alverno as a school, but as a group of individuals.

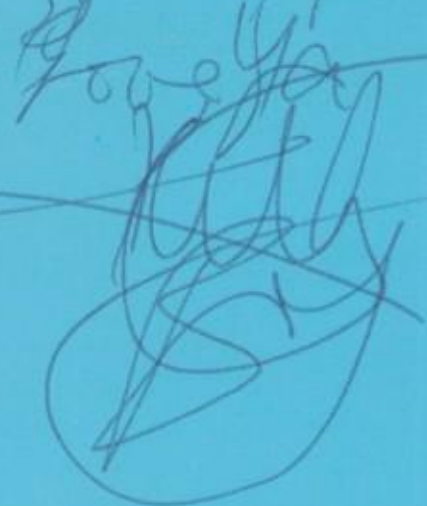

The pinnacle of unity probably came from within each of the four classes. Class chants and cheers during assemblies were signs of each class' pride and unity.

Through the many different facets of unity at Alverno during the year, the entire student body proved to be One Winning Combination.

STUDENT LIFE ONE SINGULAR SENSATION

Most students discovered that many of their important learning experiences took place outside the classroom. Involvement in clubs, plays, athletics, community service and jobs were some of the numerous areas in which students participated. Extra-curricular activities were chosen either for fun or future careers. Junior Alice Moorhead, had studied ballet for many years. Alice commented, "Ballet was a career I seriously wanted, but now I realize that certain aspects of dance aren't for me."

Social advantages provided by varied student interest, were a major asset to student life. From dating to finding a job, students had beneficial experiences. Senior Karen Mora reflected, "Through dating I've been able to meet people with different ideas. This has helped me to grow since I learn more about myself."

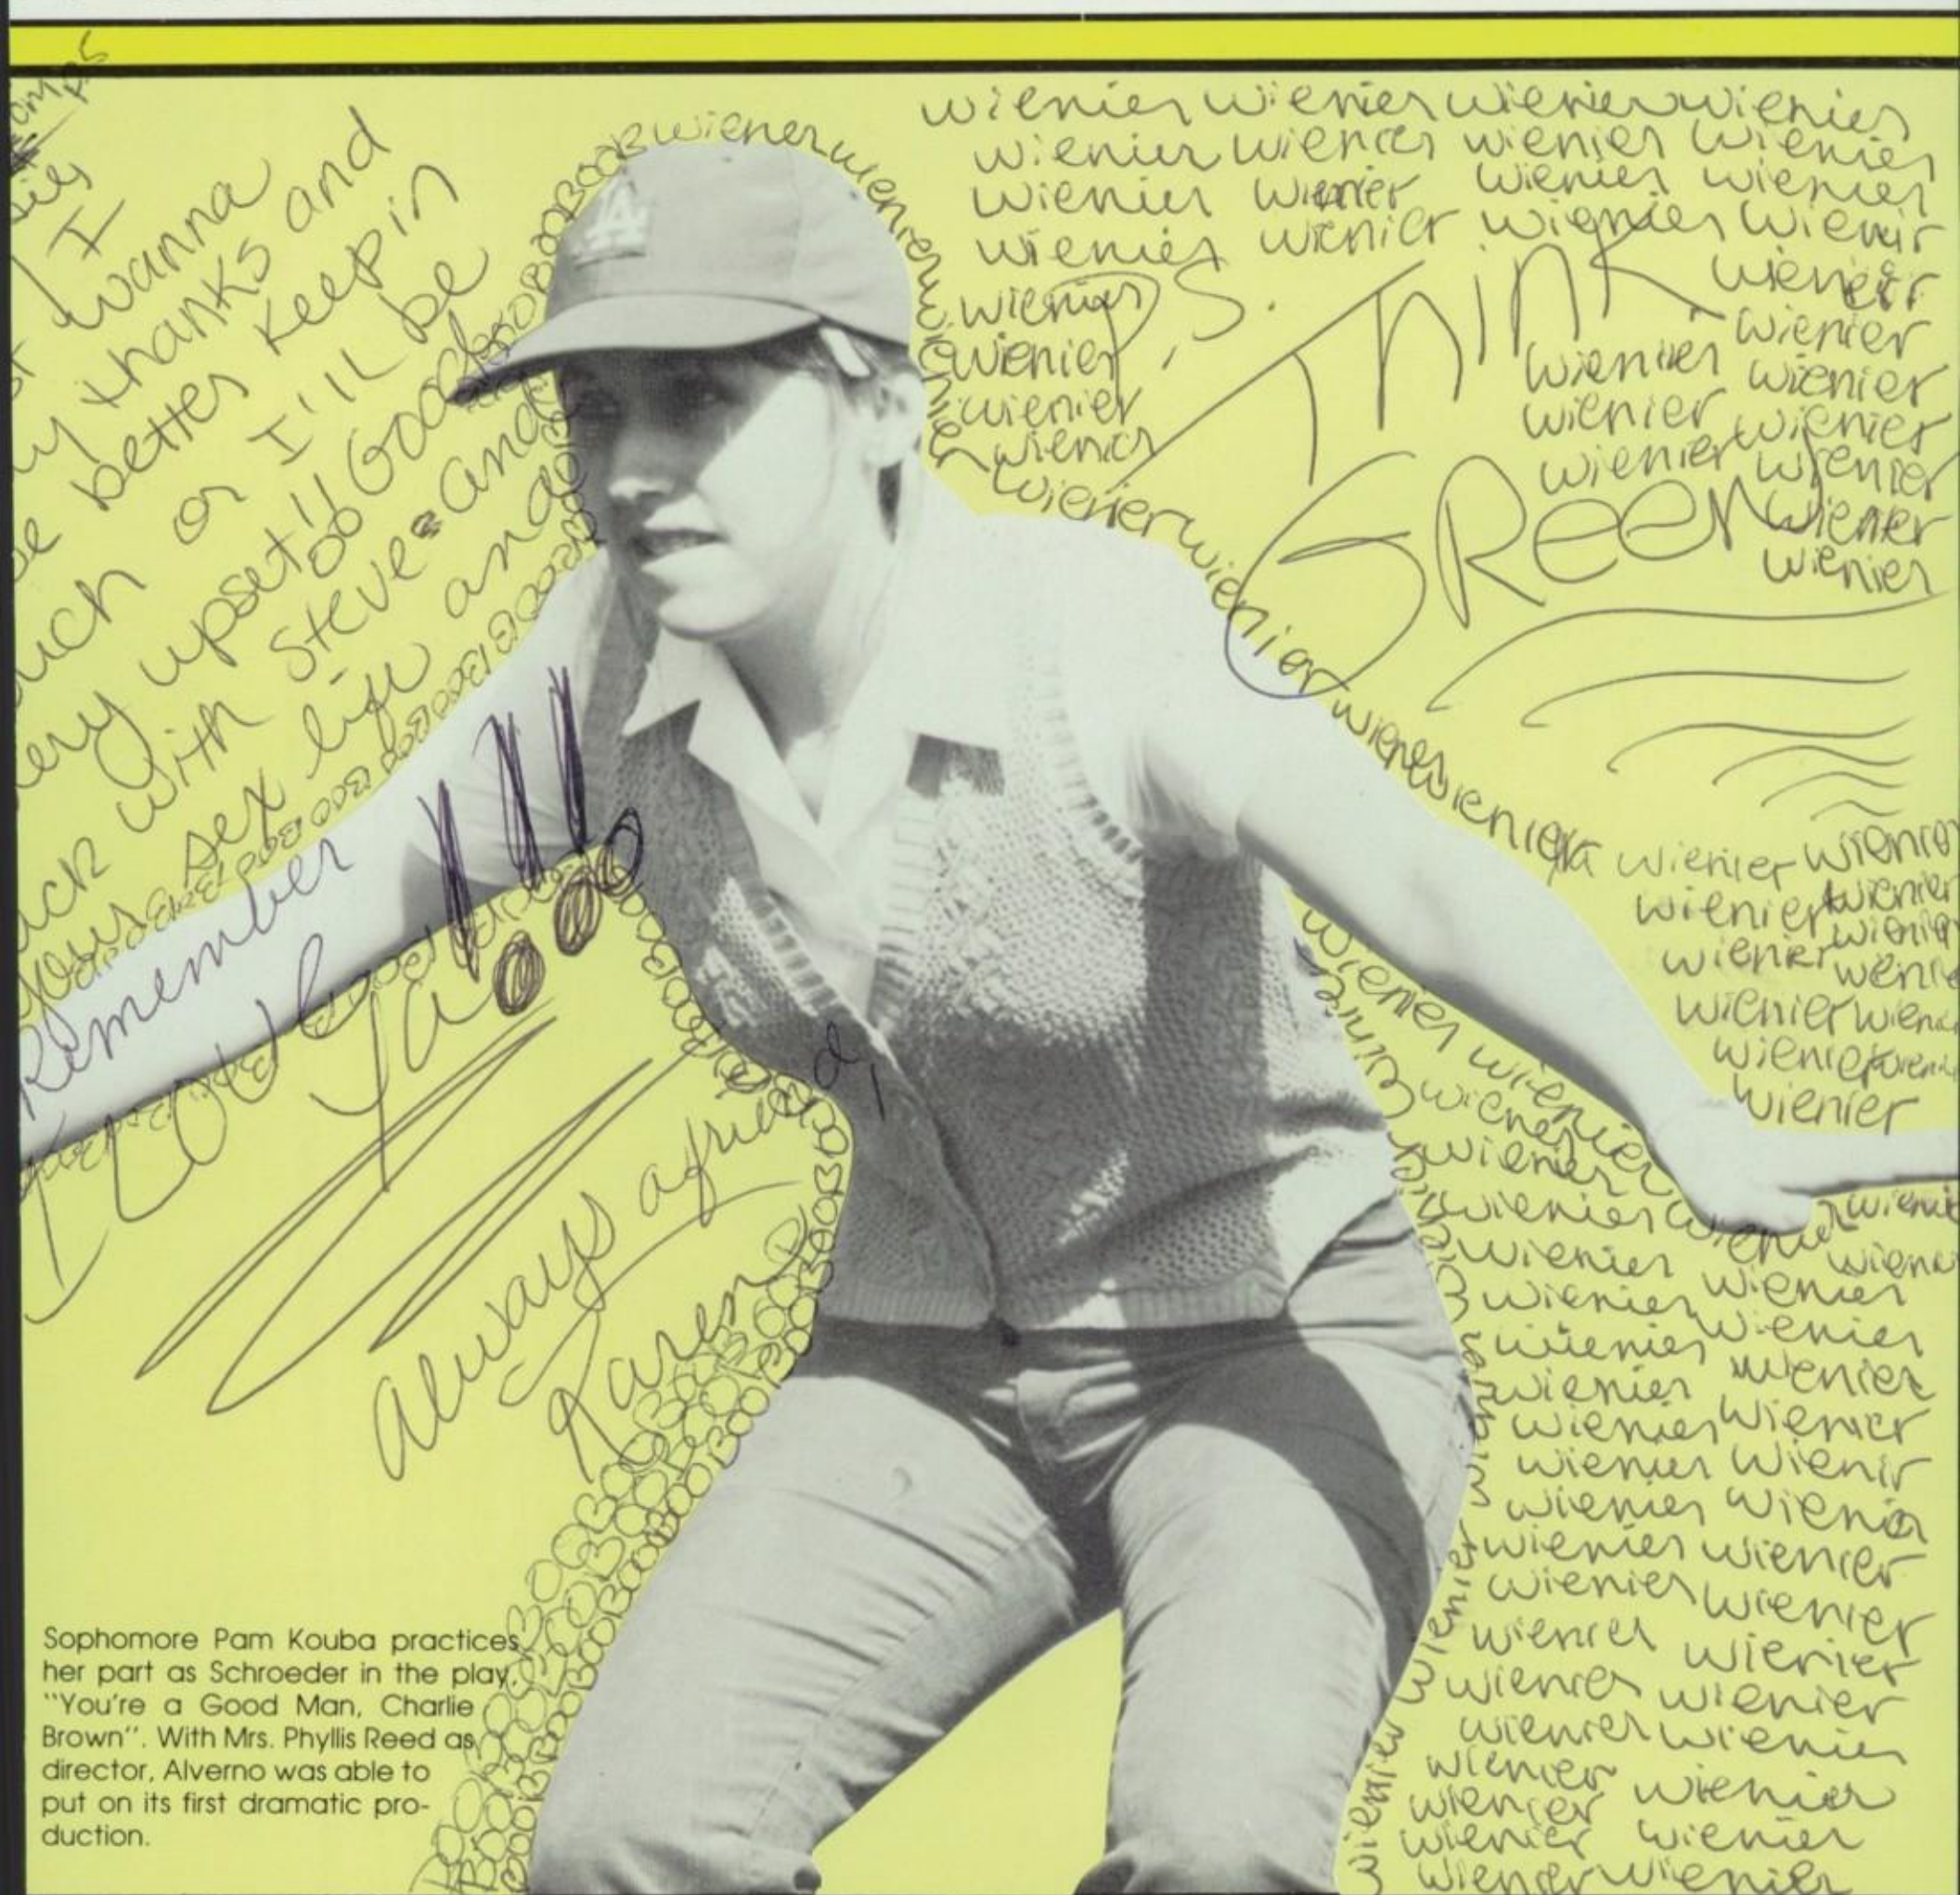

Julie Kane shows her surprise as she is elected Sophomore Class president.

Many masquerading Alverno and La Salle students are entertained by "Ricky Ricardo and the Tropicana Six". This years Halloween party was clearly one of Alverno's best.

Sophomore Pam Kouba practices her part as Schroeder in the play, "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown". With Mrs. Phyllis Reed as director, Alverno was able to put on its first dramatic production.

Celebrating An Anniversary

1980-1981 rang in Alverno High School's twentieth birthday. Alverno opened in 1960 and its first graduating class of 1964 consisted of 119 girls. In 1981, 111 girls graduated. There were many differences between Alverno of the 60's and that of the 80's. According to a Troubadour staff poll, the most controversial change seemed to be in uniforms, going from plaids, to pinstripes, to the plain brown polyester look. Other changes included the academic courses, more lay teachers, and the campus' new look. In 1981, the campus consisted of brown lockers, repainted classrooms, and refinished tennis courts. Despite these many alterations, students still felt a need for change. Among the many desired modifications were: more colorful uniforms, more variety of classes, a variety of clubs and sports.

Friday, October 3, 1980, was set aside for the celebration. The day consisted of a mass, a homeroom organized lunch exchange, and plays presented by the faculty and each class. The mass was highlighted by candles and balloons. The balloons which were released at the end of the mass represented various donations from the alumnae. After the mass, the lunches were exchanged. Following the lunches were the plays. Prizes were given to each play: The most original skit-freshmen, best performance-sophomores, most comical skit-juniors, best skit overall-seniors, and the worst skit overall went to the faculty.

There were various opinions given as to whether the celebration was a success. Of those polled, 55% felt that it was successful, while 45% felt that it was not. One of the reasons given by the latter percentage was a poor turnout by the alumnae, probably because the celebration was held during work hours. Twenty years of education had gone by, but equally important, so had twenty years of happiness, friendship, religious awareness and unity.

▲ The mass was said by Fr. Gino Piccolo O.F.M. Fr. Gino is the Art Director of a filmstrip often used for religion class called, "A'W Hungry."

♥ Christi Sommers lights a birthday candle for the mass. Candles are an important part of a celebration, and so they were present on this day.

▲ Teresa Cintron, Laura Geraci, Cheryl Lindsey, Pam Coleman, Lourdes Vita and Rosanne Ramos present the Senior Class skit, "The Creation of Alverno".

▲ Suzy Stearns speaks before the student body at mass. "Unity is a major reason for Alverno's success," she states.

Masses Encourage Cooperation

"I feel that what makes masses at Alverno special are the people." In this school special touches like dancing and music were not only common but seemed to be a must. What made these masses so unique was the fact that they were put on with the cooperation of students and faculty.

One mass that took place this year was held in memory of Sr. Maggie Jo Hulin O.S.F., the Sophomore Class moderator for '79-'80. Participation of students, particularly the juniors, with Miss Marian Finn's assistance, contributed to the mass' success. In hopes of keeping Sr. Maggie's memory alive, some students polled felt that an optional mass should take place annually in her honor.

◆ Fr. Zimmerman of Annunciation Church says the memorial mass Fr. Zimmerman had worked with Sr. Maggie on many occasions.

◆ Hilda Mena, Maria Kastafados, Cathy Micheltree, Karla Kurzweil and Mary Perry gather flowers for the procession to the statue of St. Francis. The mass was decorated with candles and flowers because they were a special part of Sister Maggie's life.

Noreen Sullivan, Nicole Williams, Monica Benzle, Mary Brkich, Kathy Betz and Desiree Tulleners say the Greeting of Peace. The mass was planned by juniors because Sister Maggie was so special to them.

▲ Fr. John Cremins celebrates the first mass of the school year. This mass was followed by the opening of the new school chapel.

◆ After the memorial mass, the juniors processed to the statue of St. Francis, the patron saint of Sr. Maggie, and decorated it with flowers.

Stepping Out In Style

Feature Story By Cathy Feeney

From Levis to designers, from Off-the-Walls to Cherokees and from preppy to punk, 61% of the students dressed in these latest up-to-date fashions. Fads of '80-'81 were present all over the campus, "getting wilder and more colorful" as Michele Krui-zena commented.

The crazy and flashy colors of punk appealed to only a small percentage of the student body. Yet, the logos of designer jeans and the casual look of Vans were walking around on more than half of the students. And of course there were those cowgirls with 44% of the students occasionally in the western attire.

Not all fashions were liked by everyone, as Ana Rodriguez put it, "fashion could look more agreeable for everyday wear." The floral print pants seem to be a fashion that 85% of the students wouldn't get caught dead in.

With the price of fashion so high, it kept many people from buying the latest styles. "I'd love to get the latest fashions but they're too expensive," explained Virginia Forest. This thought lingered in the minds of many students such as Jill Garrigan, who remarked, "I hate anyone who spends $50.00 on a pair of Gloria Vanderbilt pants!"

It's hard to know what the latest fashion is. It's always changing. But, there are just some things that people continue wearing even if it does go out of style. Regardless of whether or not a person dressed in the latest fashions some students felt that should not be an important reflection on the individual. As Adria Falvy put it, "You shouldn't judge a person by how they dress." ✂

▲ Stepping into the latest shoe wear, students display the casual to dressy look. Sometimes, they are willing to sacrifice comfort for style.

◆ Chris Vanderhaar and Nathalie Galle show off their colorful floral jumpsuits. This is a fashion which only 14% of the students wear.

▲ Crayon pins "color-up" blouses and sweaters. Pins of every shape and color are the latest in jewelry.

▲ Monica Benzle and Alicia Grabowski are dressed in plaid wool skirts. This "preppie" look was displayed throughout the year in loafers, angora sweaters and tweed blazers.

▲ Desiree Tulleners, Beth Louapre, Sherri Tagliamonte and Sandy Chester show off their top fashion jeans. Designer jeans are worn by 70% of the students.

Witches And Warlocks Party All Night

"Hey April! Did you hear about the Alverno Halloween Party?"

"No, I didn't. What Halloween party?"

"The one that took place on October 30th. It was a blast! In fact, people said that it was the best Halloween party ever put on by Alverno."

"Oh ya? What went on?"

"Well first of all, La Salle was invited. There were several games such as apple dunking and a costume contest. There was a live band, Midway, which supplied the dancing entertainment for the evening and there were plenty of free refreshments available. The eerie presence of the haunted house added to the excitement of the night. Although it had a few minor difficulties, it turned out to be an overall success. It sure was a thrilling, chilling Halloween celebration!"

"Sounds great! I wish I had come!" ✂

▲ Frank Ferrante, Mark Sanderson, Pat Griffin, Andre Dupuy, Mark Lewis, and Jim Williamson perform their skit as "Ricky Ricardo and the Tropicana Six." They were enthusiastically received by all.

▲ Vickie Slagle, Bechy Flores, Carmen Ramos, and Dayna Riddle are among the many who attended the Halloween party with creative and unique costumes.

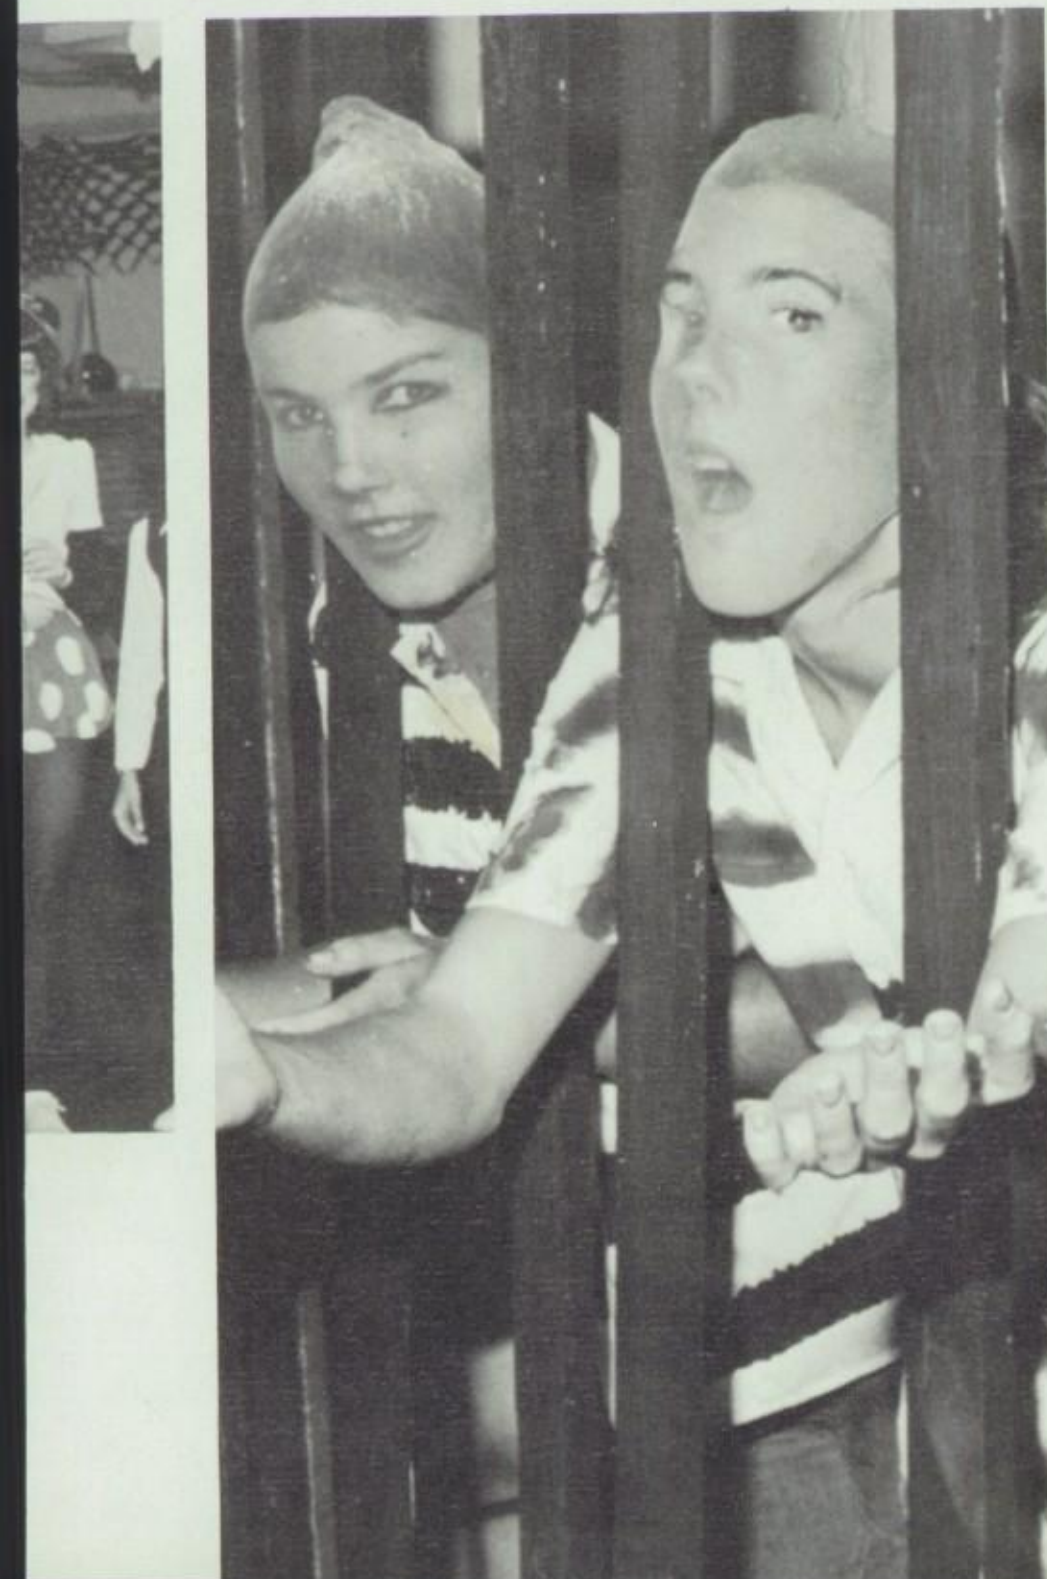

A Slice

On Thursday, October 29, on the terrace, there sat four lone pumpkins. At 11:45 a.m. a large crowd gathered, intensely looking on as the class officers hurriedly carved the pumpkins which represented their class. People contributed personal articles to enhance their class' pumpkin, such as hats, earrings and glasses.

When time ran out the pumpkins were whisked away for the judges to make their decision. Finally the choice was made and the Junior Class won first prize. The pumpkins were displayed at the Halloween party that evening to help create the proper atmosphere.

◆ Maryalice Pederson gives a warm welcome as she rises from a casket used only once by a little old lady.

◆ Holly McAllister and Mandy Downer give a slimy (vasoline) reception. The two were among the many GAA members who put together the Haunted House.

◆ Theresa Barcelos receives her scroll which officially inducts her into the student body. Sister Madeline and members of the Student Council distributed scrolls to each freshman at the induction.

▲ A dozen thoughts and feelings run through the minds of the freshmen as they sit, ready for anything, during the excitement of the induction. Only five freshmen were actually chosen to answer the questions.

Mixed Emotions Confront Freshmen

On the eve of Freshmen Induction few frosh dreamed of the surprises the next day held for them. One freshman commented later, "I looked forward to Freshmen Induction because of the excitement and the rumors about throwing us in the pond if we didn't memorize the history of Alverno." On the morning of the big day, October 27th, a couple of girls awakened to find themselves being kidnapped by their senior big sisters. The "lucky" little sisters were taken out to breakfast and brought to school in their pajamas.

Later, following a regular Monday schedule, the annual ceremony took place. Seated in front of the entire student body, many freshmen had mixed emotions about what was going to happen to them.

The frosh were welcomed by Sister Madeline and upper class officers, then the much-feared questioning about the school's history began. Names of a few freshmen were randomly drawn. Melinda Nehdan, Sarah Van Wickle and Yolanda Lennox were among several girls who were "terrorized" by the student body officers who were asking the questions. Standing before the whole school, the "victims" nervously tried to answer the questions, only to be jeered and shouted at by their friends who waved signs reading: "In the pond." "I thought I was going to be picked to answer the questions, and I was afraid I'd get thrown in the pond," said a relieved Stephanie Brkich who was not chosen. All of the freshmen received scrolls made by their big sisters, welcoming them as official members of the student body. The ceremony concluded with the freshmen leading the singing of the Alma Mater. Later the little sisters joined their senior big sisters for an informal luncheon.

The Freshmen Class seemed divided in their opinions about the traditional induction. Kelly Enright said, "I wasn't scared, I had sophomore friends to help me out," while Vicky Gloria commented bluntly, "I was scared!" Some of the girls confided that they were disappointed in the induction. As Andrea Falvy put it, "It wasn't scary to me, I don't think it turned out to be all that it was built up to be." Whatever their feelings, most of the girls agreed that Freshmen Induction will be something they will remember for a long time.

▲ Theresa Urda, Rosanna Russo and Carmen Mollica playfully menace the freshmen at the induction. The threat of throwing freshmen in the pond is a tradition.

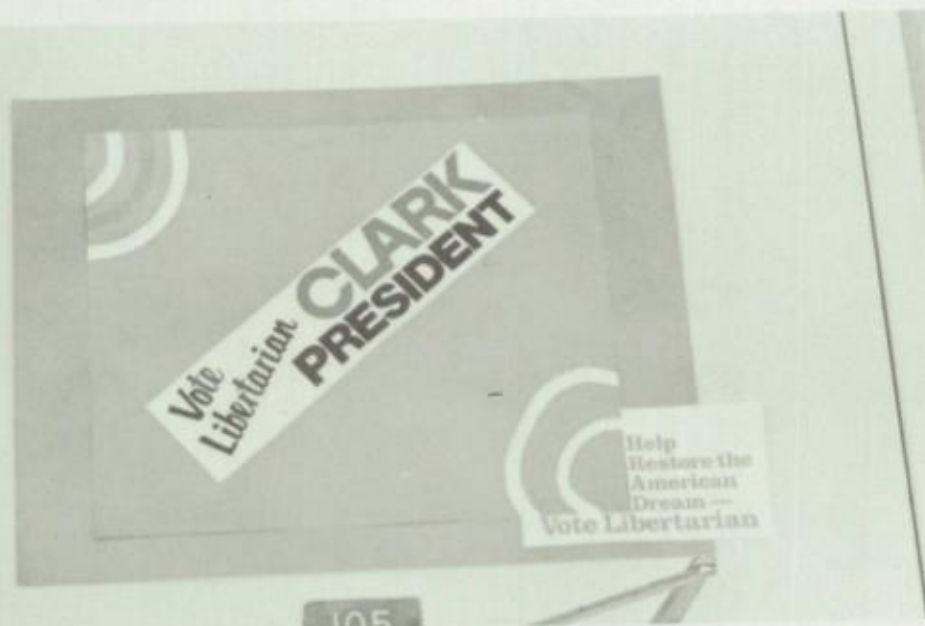

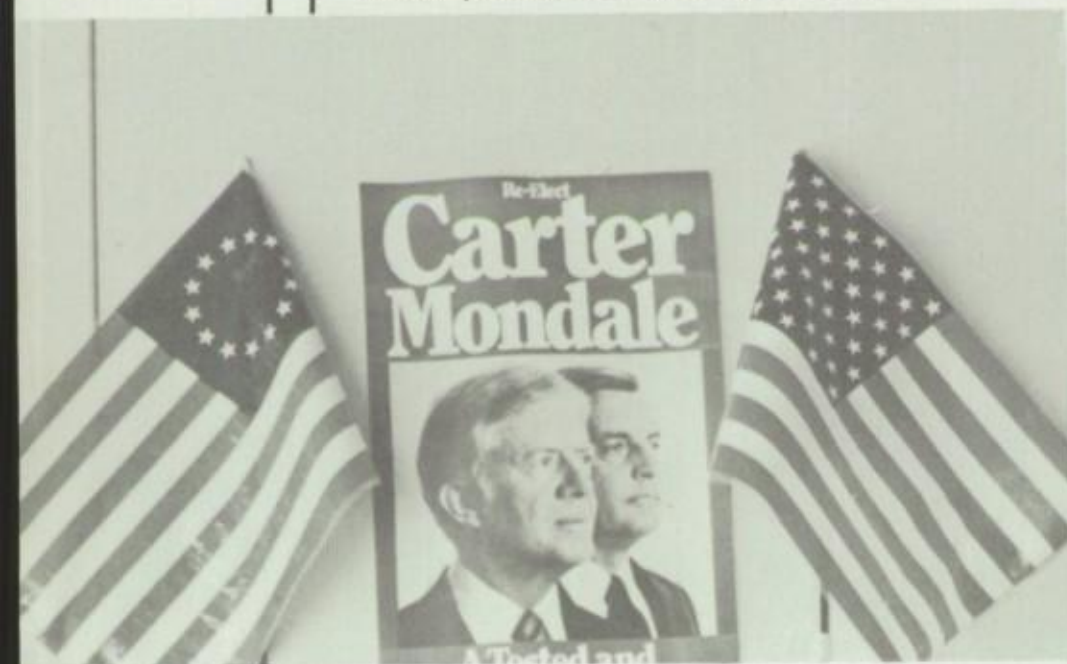

Student Polititians

Student involvement in the 1980 National Election was made evident on campus through the senior sponsored "Campaign '80." The purpose of the campaign was to give students a chance to experience the processes of voting and registration.

The mock-election began with a week of registration when each student was encouraged to register as either a Republican, Democrate, Libertarian or Independent. On November 3rd, a debate and election was held. Each political party had a few representatives who spoke on behalf of their particular party's candidate for the office of president.

After the debate the student body was instructed to go to designated classrooms to vote. When the decision was announced that afternoon Republican Ronald Reagan won by a narrow margin. Reagan had 46% of the votes, Carter 38%, Anderson 9% and Clark 7%. This election was an inaccurate prediction of the national one, because Reagan actually won by a land slide. As one sophomore said, "I felt this was educational and gave us a feel for what it will be like when we really vote."

▲ Seniors were frequently seen placing campaign posters around campus which came from local political headquarters. Different classrooms served as party stations.

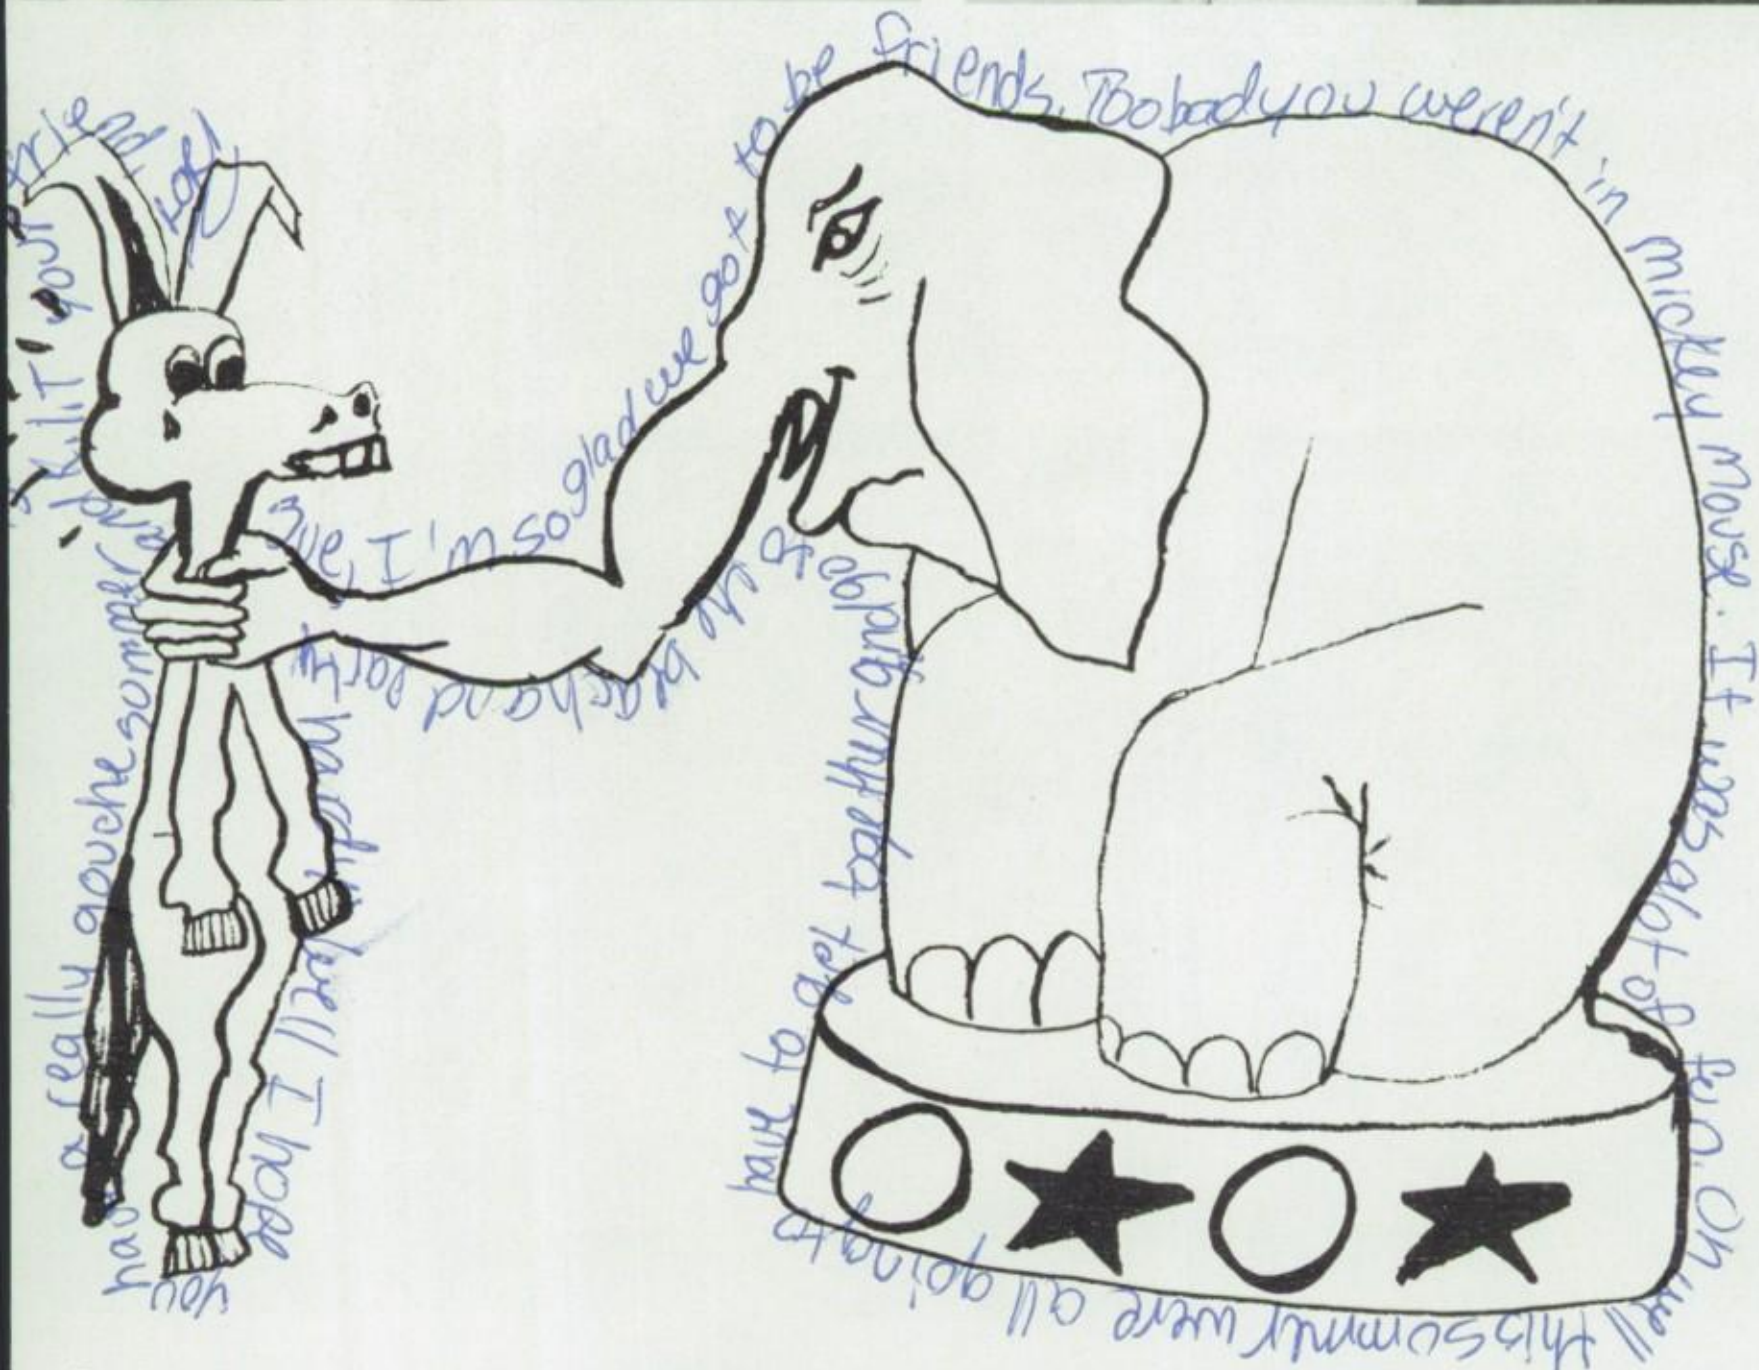

▲ Siobahn McCann and Beth Louapre, were two of the many who spent what little free time they had to work at registration. Before registering, students were informed of each parties stands on political issues.

◆ The crowd looks on at the mock debate as Mary Dolan speaks on behalf of the Democratic Party. The representatives for the three candidates "worked hard to win the majority vote of the school."

▲ The Republican Party puts the squeeze on the Democrats in the 1980 political circus. Cartoon by Becky Garcia.

"How many times do I have to tell you? It is either lemon lime or water!" Peggy Kinney emphatically repeats to her customer, as Julie Scofield, Marissa Caron and Crystal Kim watch with apprehension. The Student Council sold drinks at their saloon for 25¢ to raise additional funds.

▲ The band "Jinx" performs for the dancers at the Snow Ball. The dance was scheduled from nine to midnight, but many couples left early.

Dances Take A New Twist

In efforts to bring more excitement, higher profits and increased attendance into the dances, a new idea brought the Student Councils of both La Salle and Alverno together working for a common success. This goal required innovative planning, hard work, cooperation and active participation by many students.

In order to raise Funds to finance the Troubadour, the first dance of the year was sponsored by the yearbook staff. The band "Dealer" welcomed students back to school the evening of September 19, 1980. Friends, old and new, danced and talked, bringing the exciting news of a short vacation onto the terrace and into the enchantment of the night.

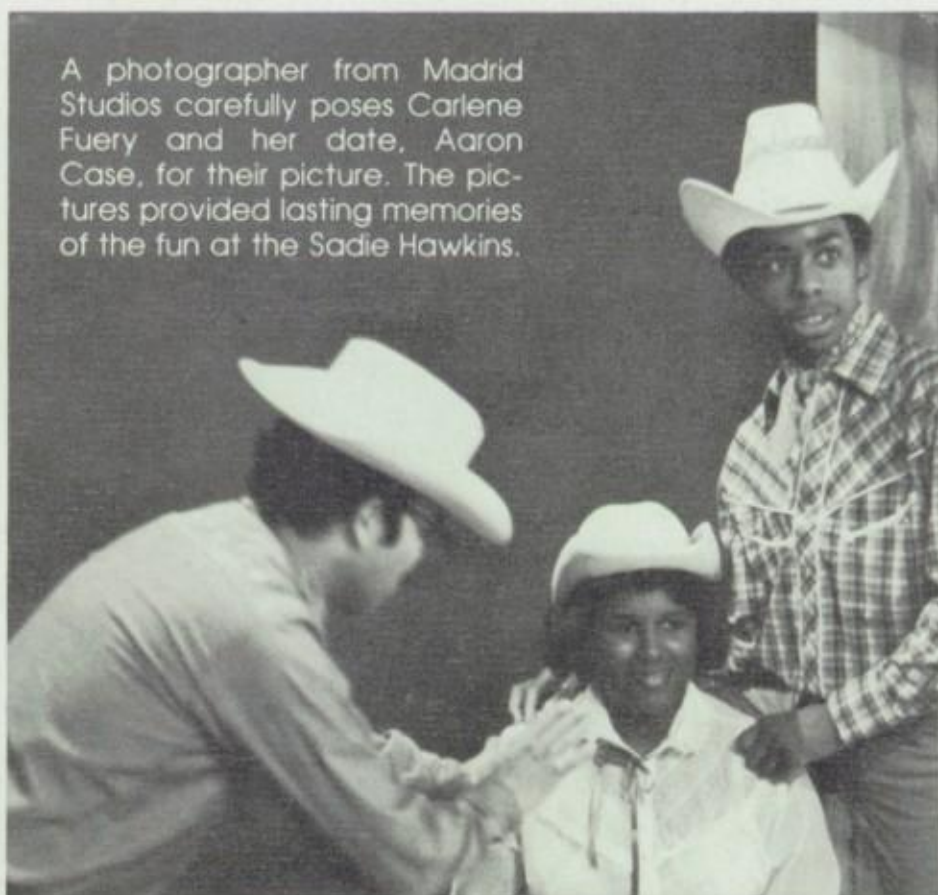

The annual Sadie Hawkins Dance held on Saturday, November 22, "was one of the highlights of the year" commented one student. The Student Council discussed many ideas to renovate the special evening. Students converted the cafeteria into a barn. Murals, hay bales, a saloon and sawdust on the floor provided an authentic western atmosphere for the couples who had paid their $5.00 to get through the barn door. A student's personal connections with members of the band "Tryx" arranged to have them play for the occasion, as couples danced the night away from 8-11 p.m. Tricia Van Koetsveld who had attended the annual dance for the second year in a row commented, "It was terrific, the band was good, and everything was better than the previous year." For $7.00, a professional photographer captured lasting memories of the couples who dressed in casual western attire. Peggy Kinney, ASB Social Chairperson, was really excited with the results of the dance. "The Sadie Hawkins turned out great, everyone seemed to have a really fun time."

Originally offered by La Salle only, the Snow Ball was co-sponsored by both La Salle and Alverno for the first time. This new action enabled the girls to ask their own friends to the semi-formal if they didn't have "friends" at La Salle. The students went all out selling tickets at $8.00 a bid, rented 25 round tables, purchased a Christmas tree and decorated St. Rita's Hall the day of the dance, Friday, December 19, after noon dismissal.

As to be expected, students enjoyed themselves at the dances, however, Anne Howells, who attended both the Snow Ball and the Sadie Hawkins, preferred the latter for its rustic, fun-loving, good ol' memories.

◆ Jane Fuller, Mary Lees and her "doll" of a date mug for the photographer at the Sadie Hawkins. A few girls "crashed the party" bringing other girls, little brothers and puppets as their dates, which added to the fun of the evening.

Feature story by Desiree Tulleners

In addition to the daily routine of school, world events were also on the minds of students as we made the transition into the 80's.

1980 was an election year. Candidates Reagan, Carter and Anderson were involved in the strategies of political campaigning, while the world kept moving: inflation, recession, unemployment, riots and terrorism all took their toll.

In a landslide victory, Ronald Reagan became the 40th President of the United States. Only two months into his term, an assassination attempt was made on the President's life by John Hinkley, a 25 year old Colorado man. In excellent shape, the 70 year old President recovered quickly from the gunshot wound and resumed performing the duties of his office.

After 444 days, the 52 American hostages, held captive by Iranian militants, came home. The story of their ordeal read like a spy novel: Canada sneaking six Americans out of Iran in the first days following the embassy take-over, threats of Iranian spy trials for the hostages, a secret rescue attempt in April of 1980 by U.S. military commandos ending in a fiery crash and eight dead and on-again off-again negotiations for the captives' release. The hostages finally returned home to an ecstatic welcome of symbolic yellow ribbons and ticker-tape parades as the U.S. received them with open arms.

A sudden invasion of Afghanistan by Soviet soldiers triggered fresh fears throughout the world. In protest, President Carter dropped his advocacy of SALT II and announced abruptly that the U.S. athletes should boycott Moscow's Summer Olympics.

The Summer Olympics were boycotted. However, the spectacular victory of the young U.S. Hockey team over the Russians at the Lake Placid Winter Olympics brought about a kind of exaltation that carried America through the boycott.

In the area of science, the Voyager II space lab sent back photos of Saturn showing scientists that the planet's famous rings are braided. And after 123 years of inactivity, Washington's Mount St. Helens exploded with a force 500 times greater than the Hiroshima A-bomb.

"All we are saying, is give peace a chance," chanted thousands of John Lennon fans as they kept a vigil outside his New York apartment after his senseless murder in December, 1980. Lennon was shot by a young man who had approached the former Beatle just days before to get his autograph.

Anything western was in; $500,000,000 was spent on western hats, $45,000,000 worth of Kenny Rogers records sold and country/western singer Barbara Mandrell was named "Entertainer of the Year." Films like "Urban Cowboy", "Honeysuckle Rose" and "The Electric Horseman" were among the most popular films of the year.

The film and television industries, nearly crippled by a two month actors strike during the summer of 1980, brought to life such loveable characters as Yoda the "Empire Strikes Back" philosopher, and such villains as J.R. Ewing (Larry Hagman) on the Friday night soap opera "Dallas". The November 21st show in which the most asked question of the summer, "Who shot J.R.?" was answered, had the highest ratings in television history of any single T.V. episode.

Through various efforts, Pope John Paul II and the Bishops' Synod worked to bring peace and unity to a troubled world.

Juniors Make It Official

The Class of 1982 held their Junior Ring Ceremony on Monday, November 17, 1980. Much hard work went into the preparation of the traditional rite, which students, faculty and parents attended by formal invitation. The Junior Class moderator, Ms. Angela Bonja, the Junior Class officers, various committee heads and members met together for many brainstorming hours in the weeks preceding the event. Shakey's Pizza Night, sponsored by the juniors, and other fund-raisers made up the budget used to finance the ceremony.

Blue and yellow carnations to be carried by each junior were ordered for the special day. The lower lawns of the villa were chosen for the location, and the villa terrace was decorated with blue and yellow car carnations and streamers for the reception. The class symbol, the dragon, was used on a banner bearing the motto, "Like the dragon, we don't breathe smoke, we breathe fire." Detailed typed instructions on the back of each junior's chair told the juniors exactly what to do and when. This careful procedure demonstrated what Michele Adams later commented on. "I thought the ceremony was very well organized, it was beautiful without being over-dramaticized."

Father Jack Foley presided over the ceremony. Jean Shinnick, Monica Auzene, Sandy Steele and Mary Noonan presented some readings about the dragon and its meaning to the class. "You've got a friend" was sung in harmony by Kathy Betz and Mary Lees, followed by the distribution of the rings to the Junior Class. Fred Barrett and Jeff Bonja volunteered their services as musicians for the ceremony, and accompanied the juniors who sang their class song, "Time In a Bottle."

After the ceremony, Jackie DeClue said, "I thought the ceremony was well presented, it was just long enough to make the occasion special without running on and on." Junior Class vice-president Noreen Sullivan, relieved to have the hard work over with commented, "I thought it went really well. Everyone in the class did what they were suppose to do, and their participation and spirit made the ceremony run smoothly." ✍

Thanksgiving season was celebrated in the usual manner this year. Student council organized an assembly in which a short prayer service and slide show enhanced the thankful atmosphere. It gave everyone the opportunity to reflect upon the meaning of the season. A quick exchange of desert gifts among the students also took place.

Once again a food drive was held the week before Thanksgiving. One sophomore stated, "I'm so glad that I was one of the many girls who participated in this Thanksgiving's food drive. It was my privilege to go down to El Monte and deliver food to the people there. Being with these people on Thanksgiving helped me to understand the true meaning of this holiday."

Students Support Needy

In the spirit of the season, students willingly gave canned goods, fresh fruits and nuts to help make a special Thanksgiving for others.

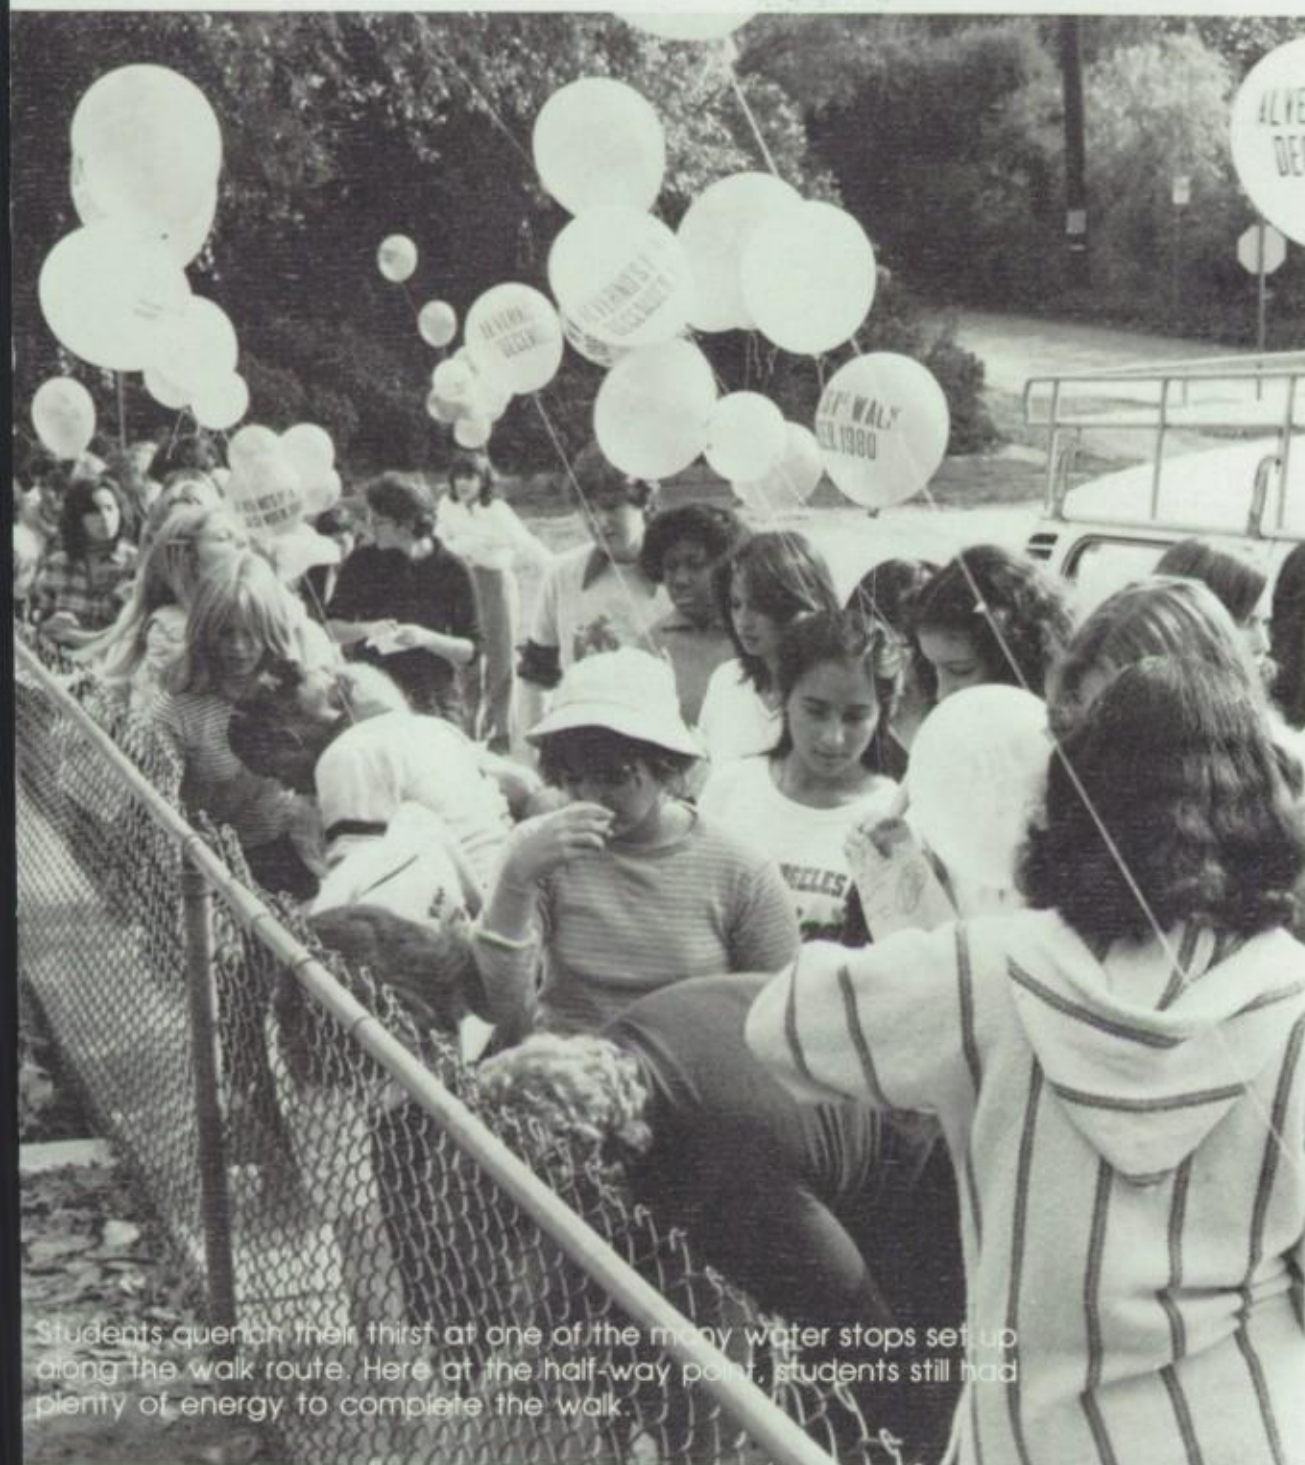

◆ Peggy Kinney introduces the slide show which opened the prayer service. The message was to remind the students of their blessings and gifts on campus.

▲ Monique Williams represents the Freshmen Class as she expressed the spirit of giving. The slide-show/prayer service was a success as well as the desert gift trade among the students.

"Walk Around The Block"

Students quench their thirst at one of the many water stops set up along the walk route. Here at the half-way point, students still had plenty of energy to complete the walk.

Alverno's walk, according to one junior, "was a big success". Many girls had fun while raising money for the school.

The main purpose of the walk was to raise money and to use it for something constructive, that everyone could recognize. Thanks to Mrs. Betty Quayle, the Advancement Director, from whom the walk idea originally derived, everyone enjoyed the day while raising $6980. Although a cause for the money had not been designated yet, most students responded that they would approve of any use. Each student who had a $50 quota of pledges received a free Alverno T-Shirt.

A free lunch was served to each student, which consisted of: a hot dog, potato chips, a snack and a fruit drink. Following the lunch, a disc jockey supplied the students with dancing music.

◆ Kelly Timpone, Carmen Ramos and Becky Flores decide to sprint the home stretch. The 5 mile walk was completed in under 2 hours by most.

▲ Students wave at the camera as they dance to the music of KFI's disc jockey. Many found more exercise in dancing than in walking the 5 miles.

Dear Santa,

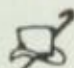

Before starting my report of Christmas 1980, I want to tell you that I've never seen a school that values and looks forward to this season as much as the girls at this school do.

The girls celebrated with a Glee Club presentation. Members of the club sang a new song called "The Twelve Days After Christmas," which gave an interesting view of the days following the holiday. The rest of the student body had a chance to show off their vocal chords when they gathered on the terrace to sing familiar carols.

Some of the girls "gave a little of themselves" to a day care center whose children were entertained by the play "Twas the Night Before Christmas". I overheard Amy Huber, who played a tree say that, "One of the kids squeezed my arm and asked why I was standing there so funny." The children seemed to especially enjoy the arrival of Santa Claus.

Although the season seemed to go well, some felt that it was heavily burdened with long term assignments that were due after vacation. One junior said, "Christmas just wasn't right because of all the homework." But a new event, the Snowball dance, which was co-sponsored with LaSalle, probably helped them forget their troubles. Working on a new fund raiser, the Christmas Boutique, kept them busy as well.

Until next year, be good. And relax before the next rush.

Being ¢entsible Pays

Feature Story By Peggy Kinney

"Do you have to work tonight?" One out of every eight girls would have answered "yes". Students who worked had to consider schedules before becoming too involved with school. Last year 13% of the student body held part-time jobs on top of their study workload.

A Troubadour survey showed 19% of these "working women" volunteered service time, 70% were paid employees, and less than 1% managed to hold both a voluntary and paying job.

Student volunteers served the community in a variety of ways, including gradeschool tutoring, teaching religion courses at parishes and assisting with general office work for non-profit organizations.

Senior Charisse Morelli worked fourteen hours each at Villa Esperanza's recreation workshop. "Helping the mentally retarded makes me appreciate myself," she said. Other students worked with the handicapped at the Crippled Children's Society of Pasadena, and the blind at CLIMB in Sierra Madre. "I do everything but give shots and empty bedpans," explained Kristi Henkels, a volunteer at Huntington Memorial Hospital.

A few girls said they wanted the work experience in order to continue similar social work in the future. However, some girls worked either for Christian Service class credit, or as one senior responded, "I work there just as enjoyment."

Of the paid employees, 94% worked because they wanted the extra spending money or to begin saving for college. Paychecks also helped to pay for high school tuition and finance costly social lives. Patti Pullara worked at Fedco's garden shop "just to get out of the house and meet people." A relatively small number of sophomores and juniors had intentions of saving to buy a car. Carolyn Volmert prepared meals for patients at Arcadia Methodist Hospital in hopes of earning money for a trip to Alaska.

The two most common jobs were floor salesgirls and food related jobs, as waitresses or fast-food clerks. Fashion-related jobs were equally as popular as secretarial work.

Only 18% had any intentions of continuing their job as a career. As Mary Dolan said, "I don't plan to sell shoes the rest of my life!"

The results of a staff poll found that students worked an average of 18 hours per week. Many girls said that their jobs interfered with their school work, but as Desiree Tulleners stated, "I usually arrange my work schedule around my school schedule."

The cafeteria takes on a different look with decorations made for the "Stairway to Heaven" theme of the dance. Over 700 couples attended the biggest activity of the sophomore year.

'Heavenly' Night For Sophomores

"Are you serious? It's 5:15! Craig is going to pick me up at 5:30 to go out for dinner. Oh, Mom my hair is still in rollers and we still have to pick up the boutonniere. I'm shaking all over. Why am I so nervous?"

This scene was taking place in the homes of many sophomores as the recently transformed cafeteria was awaiting their arrival for the biggest event of the sophomore year: The Cherry Blossom. The plain cafeteria had been turned into a shiny "Stairway to Heaven," the dance's theme. A starry atmosphere was created by the decorations committee by hanging glittered styrofoam stars, crepe paper streamers and pom-pom balls from the ceiling. The walls were masked with cloud and rainbow paintings, and straw baskets filled with daisies and carnations decorated the tables. The romantic mood was completed by tiny white lights hung in the trees outside the cafeteria.

Meanwhile, most sophomores and their dates had dinner out before the dance. They ate in a variety of restaurants ranging from The Hungry Tiger to In-n-Out.

Couples began arriving at the dance about 8:00 p.m. Most of them had posed pictures taken by the professional to help them remember the evening. The band Clone provided "great music, but took too many breaks," commented Christine Speckert. Tables inside the cafeteria provided a place for couples to relax and talk with friends. Outside, girls and their dates could get some fresh air and stroll among the lighted trees.

Although the dance was over at 11:30 p.m., the evening did not end for many couples. Kris Vanderhaar and her date went to see "The Rocky Horror Picture Show", and Rosann Volmert and her escort went to Hollywood. After all that dancing, many couples had worked up an appetite so they went out to eat again.

The success of the dance was certainly evident in the girls' responses to the question, "If you had it to do all over again, would you go to the dance again?" 99% said, "Yes!"

◆ A slow song gives Carrie Snyder and Ian Angus a chance to enjoy a few moments of closeness. The slow songs were much more popular than the fast ones.

♥ Worn out after a long evening, Linda Pichel and Donny Whitlock try to last until the band leaves. The price for the evening's entertainment was only $8.00 per couple.

Surrounded by his equipment, Clone's drummer gets into his solo. Many students complained that the band took too many breaks.

◆ Outside the cafeteria, friends get some fresh air and a little quiet. The decorations committee placed small lights in the surrounding trees to add to the atmosphere.

Pressure To Make The Grade

Feature Story By Ann Howells

"Oh!! When is it all going to end?!" was often the cry of students as they examined their agenda for the day. Senior Sue Webster described her pressure-filled days as having "too much to do with not enough time in which to do it slowly and carefully." When polled, students claimed they did as many as six hours of homework each night, with 3.3 hours being the average. Many stated that they felt school and homework were the main causes of the pressure they faced. "School is the usual cause of pressure. The only way to face it is to do what's expected of you." stated Lourdes Vita.

The subjects in which students faced the most pressure varied from Basic Art to Calculus. Of the seniors polled, 62% said that in their senior year they faced the most pressure, not only in school, but in extra-curricular activities, jobs and in the important decision of what to do after graduation. The remaining 38% all agreed that their junior year contained the most pressure - especially in academics.

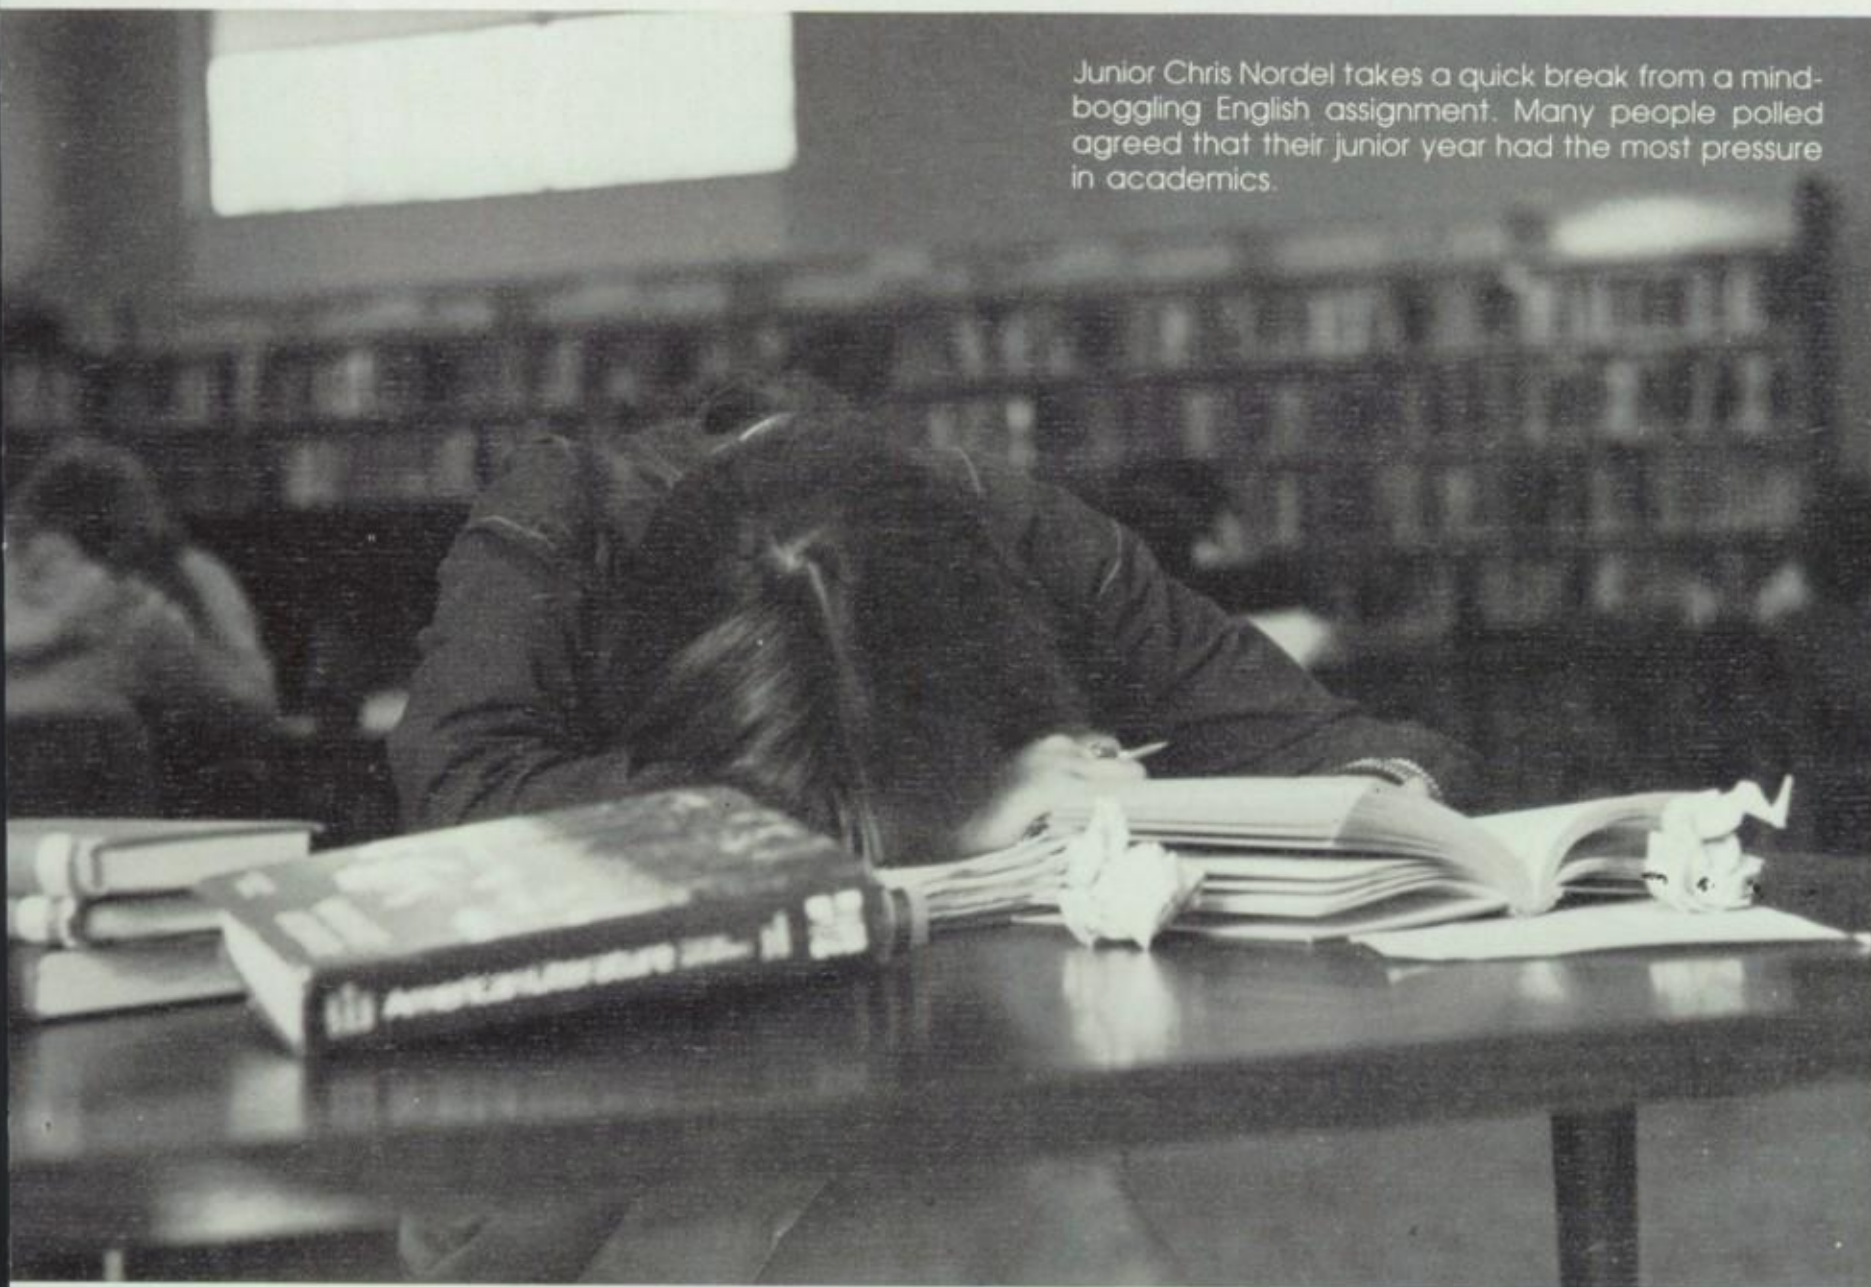

Some students regarded pressure as a negative aspect. "Pressure is when I have something hanging over my head which makes me feel like my whole body is collapsing into the earth!" explained Stacy Beaudet. Like many others, Ingrid Uyemura described her typical day as "total insanity."

However, other students saw pressure as a positive aspect which motivated them to work their hardest. 52% of the students polled admitted that they doubted they would work as hard if there were no pressure. As Monica Tinker stated, "Pressure is a force which is needed to get students moving. If there were no pressure, nothing would ever get done."

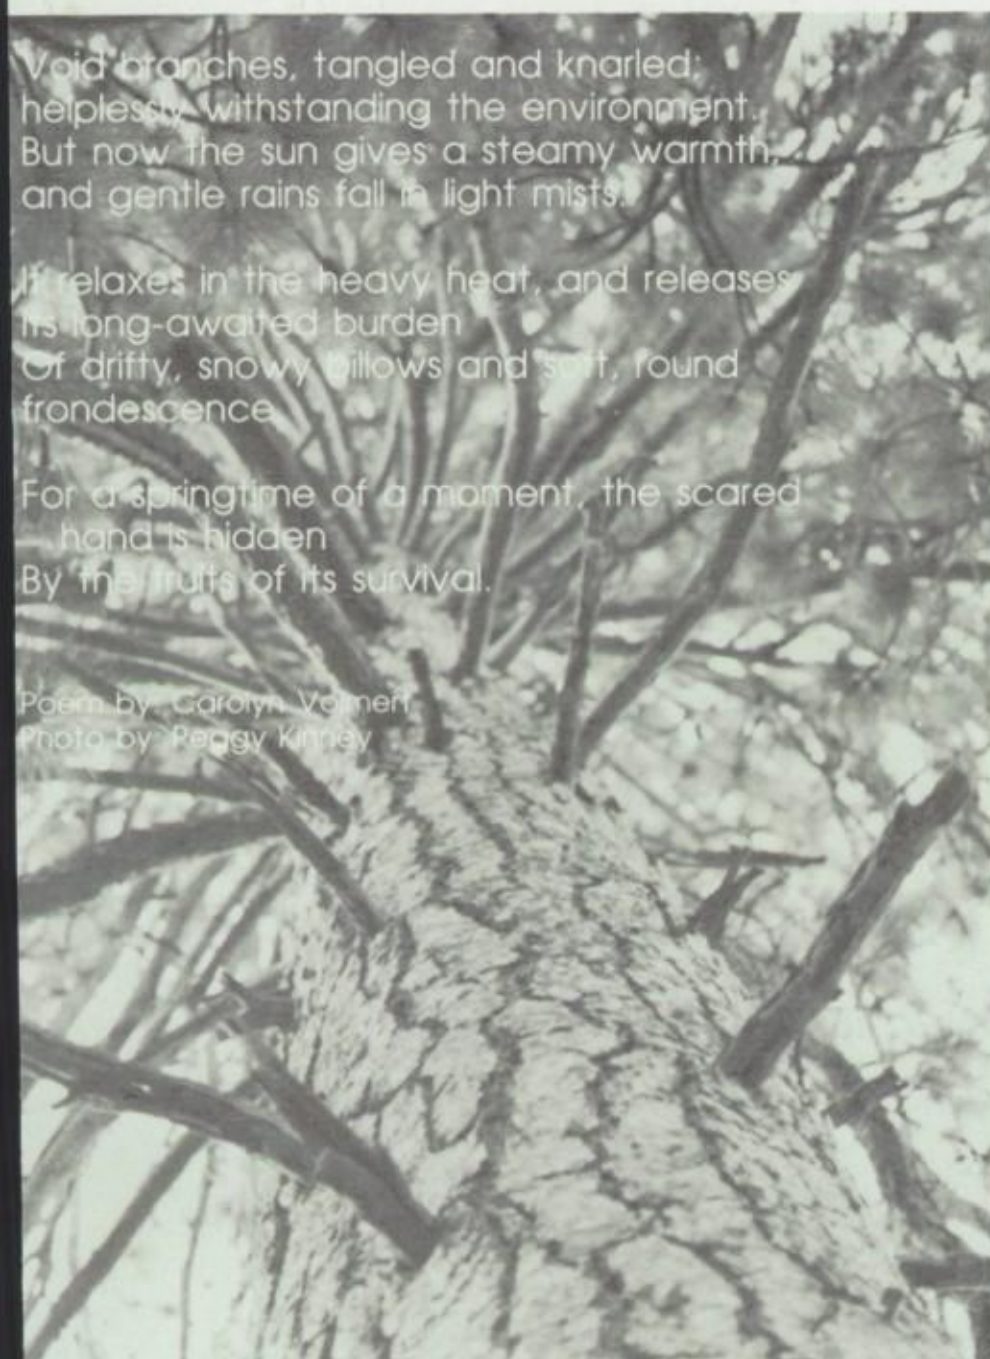

Junior Chris Nordel takes a quick break from a mind-boggling English assignment. Many people polled agreed that their junior year had the most pressure in academics.

Void branches, tangled and knarled;
helplessly withstanding the environment.
But now the sun gives a steamy warmth,
and gentle rains fall in light mists.

It relaxes in the heavy heat, and releases
its long-awaited burden
Of drifts, snowy billows and soft, round frondescence.

For a springtime of a moment, the scared hand is hidden
By the fruits of its survival.

ARTISTIC EXPRESSION

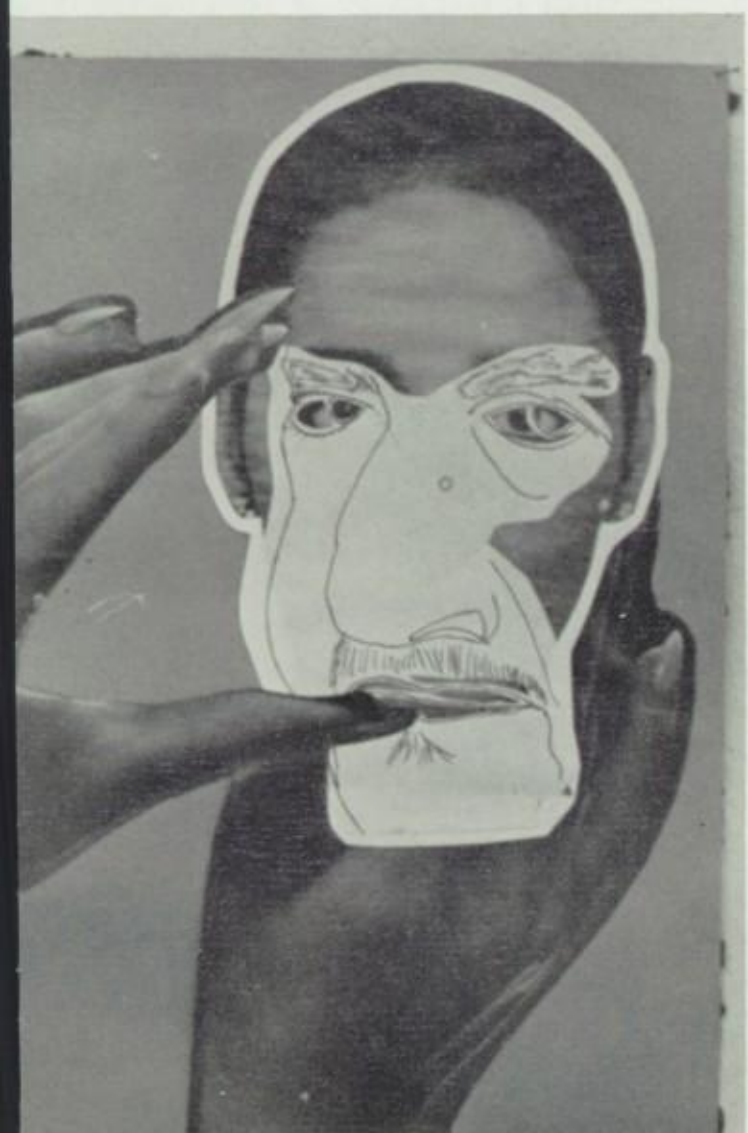

Fine Arts (fin) (arts) n. 1. Those arts which seek expression through beautiful or significant modes. It includes music, literature, opera, and ballet, as well as painting, sculpture, architecture, and the decorative arts. The word "Fine" is often taken to mean beautiful or aesthetically pleasing, such as Vivian Sciolini believed, who described Fine Arts as, "anything with feeling and beauty."

The making of an artifact takes time and patience. Mental fatigue tends to slow down an artist's creativity, but it will rarely stop him. To have completed a work of art shows strength, loyalty, courage, compassion, sympathy, and caring on the behalf of the artisan. This is how an artist expresses fine arts. ✎

POTTERY FIRED UP

Pottery is a type of decorative or useful ware made of baked clay. It includes dinnerware, vases, and other household items. The word "pottery" also means a factory that makes pottery products.

The three major types of pottery are earthenware, stoneware, and porcelain. Pottery is classified according to the mixture of clays it contains, and the temperature affects both the appearance and strength.

There are four basic steps in making pottery. First, the potter selects and prepares the clay he wants to use. He shapes it, using either the coil, slab or mold method. After the clay dries, the potter may coat it with a smooth glaze. Finally, the pottery is baked in an oven to harden. Carol Whitmore commented, "It was fun, interesting, and creative."

SENSATION PEOPLE ONE SINGULAR SENSATION

During the Alma Mater, Liz Trembaly proudly holds up one finger, symbolizing her one year at Alverno. Most students think the Alma Mater is suitable while a few wish it could be "updated" . . .

ONE SINGULAR SENSATION ONE SINGULA

Although each of the four classes was unique and distinguishable from the other, they each were elements of a united student body. As each class strove to organize special activities such as the Senior Style Show, Junior Ring Ceremony, Cherry Blossom and Freshmen Induction, they were able to unite as a class. Through the leadership of the class officers and moderators, students demonstrated cooperation and energy.

More important than the four classes were the individuals in them. The bubbling talker, the quiet observer, the unquitting organizer and the intellectual achiever added to the diversity of the student body. Without the uniqueness of each individual, Alverno would not have been so diverse and so exciting.

▲ Mary O'Donnell and Karla Kurzweil spread their excitement about the Sadie Hawkins to the student body as they sing "I'm Just a Girl Who Can't Say No." The student's response to their song was enthusiastic.

◆ During the Freshmen Induction, students express their desire to throw the freshmen "in the pond." One freshman commented, "The signs didn't scare me; I thought it was kind of funny."

Looking Into The Past And Future

"We the people, in order to form a more perfect union..." These words may sound like a leftover from Civics Class, but they applied to the Senior Class of 1981. The "unicorn" class developed a sense of spirit that allowed individualism, and at the same time, unity in working towards a common goal. However, the road leading toward this goal, graduation, was never easy.

Through the years, the seniors went through many school changes; modular scheduling gave way to a fixed one and winter and summer uniforms were combined into a single style. Mary Villarruel commented, "Although some changes may have been unwanted, what we've been through will help us to adapt easily and more efficiently in jobs and schooling in the future."

Privileges . . . Short, But Appreciated

It is a tradition that after three years of hard work, the Senior Class requests certain privileges to distinguish them from the rest of the student body. The privileges were taken from senior suggestions and then decided upon by the administration.

Seniors were granted off-campus lunch on Friday afternoons and later two extra "floating" days were added. A cafeteria "express" line was specially designated for senior use and free dress every Friday was also put into action.

When seniors were asked in a Troubadour staff poll about how they spent their lunch time, they agreed that the allotted 45 minutes were shared between cafeteria lines, actual eating and study time in the library. A small percentage used the time for running errands or for Christian Service. Those who participated in off-campus found it difficult to return by 12:45 for their fifth period class. Officers Express Their Concern

The Senior Class officers included two new-comers and two veterans. President Sharon Moscaret and class treasurer Cheryl Lindsey brought with them their fresh ideas as this was their first experience as class officers. Vice-president Teresa Cintron and secretary Susie Fisher were former officers who continued as a positive force.

All the officers agreed in a Troubadour staff interview that keeping the seniors united was a major goal of theirs. Sharon stated, "The officers wanted to express to the class through everyday events that honesty with themselves and others would help them achieve more, and not just in finishing their last year of high school. Developing feelings and a good outlook on life were also goals we strove for."

To Be Or Not To Be . . .

"What are you going to be when you grow up?" Our first contact with this question in grade school usually brought a simple decision—a "movie star" or "Suzy homemaker." Our second encounter with decision making occurred by the end of junior year. But this time the questioner was not our parents, or our teachers, but a computerized phenomenon called the Scholastic Aptitude Test, better known as the SAT.

Most commonly the SAT was taken in the fall of senior year, but many brave juniors prepared to "meet their destiny" in June. As test scores reached students, decisions concerning college had already started formulating. By October, Miss Marion Peterson's counseling office in the library became the most popular spot since Huntington Beach on a summer afternoon. With Miss Peterson's help, students were able to explore their interests through filmstrips and catalogs, and were also given the chance to hear college representatives. The months to follow brought prayers for acceptance as seniors painstakingly filled out applications, muddled through financial aid forms, and tracked down their favorite teacher in a desperate search for a letter of recommendation.

In addition to those who wished to attend college immediately after high school, 25-30% of seniors felt that college wasn't for them at the moment. Their reasons ranged from indecision about careers to a desire for more experience in the real world before settling down to academics.

The Treasures Of The Sierra Madre

The month of October became a time of watching and waiting for the Senior Class as many found themselves standing in front of judges and wearing a designated number. Of the hundreds of girls trying out for the 1980-81 Rose Court, only seven would be chosen with one of them becoming the Rose Queen. After being called back four times, Lourdes Vita found herself chosen as a Rose Princess.

Sharing the royal limelight with Lourdes was another senior, Cindy Clark. Cindy, along with freshman Melanie Meinholz, were chosen out of 27 girls competing for a seat on the float representing the city of Sierra Madre in the Rose Parade. Cindy and Melanie were two of the three placed for the city. In addition to the Tournament princesses, Gina Aubry was selected as a Homecoming princess for St. Francis High School in La Canada.

Not only did Lourdes, Cindy and Gina represent their cities, but they also stood for Alverno, especially the seniors. The girls renewed school pride and had given the seniors something to remember. Brenda Grobarek commented, "A lot of seniors got together on the day of the parade to cheer on Lourdes and Cindy. Posters were made with 'Alverno seniors are here' written on them." ✍

Participating in annual fall and winter festivities outside school were Gina Aubry, a St. Francis Homecoming Princess, Cindy Clark, a Princess for the City of Sierra Madre's Rose float, and Lourdes Vita, a member of the 1980-81 Rose Parade Court.

"Hit Me With Your Best Shot!"

It seemed that the hottest day of the year was to be the big day, the moment of truth, when seniors went through the ritual of portrait taking. Prayers for a slightly cool day didn't seem to help much as seniors strolled into the portrait studio appropriately dressed in shorts, jap flaps, wool sweaters and, occasionally, a string of pearls. As makeup turned to mush and hair drooped the girls faced the camera and were ready with their pre-practiced smiles.

Next came the wait and then the proofs arrived, ready to be cropped and processed, only to find mixed feelings. After disappointing results with the original studio, Mr. Bill Christy from The Portrait Gallery retook the portraits at the request of Mrs. Kathi Bailey, yearbook adviser. Luckily the weather was pleasant this time around. The "new" senior portraits were to be taken during regular school hours. Appointments were made in alphabetical order, between 9:00-2:00. Those who had to take theirs in the later part of the day worried about their makeup and whether or not their hair would stay curled.

This time the Troubadour and the seniors were satisfied with the results. As evidence of this, some seniors ordered additional prints the second time around.

The Voice Of Experience

In a Troubadour staff interview, seniors were asked what advice they would like to give to the underclassmen. They responded eagerly although a few had a mischievous gleam in their eye. As senior personalities vary from seriousness to lightheartedness, so did their advice.

"Study hard now so you won't be disappointed." Wendy Slavin.

"Be patient; don't give up because nothing's easy. Also it is important to have a good attitude." Susie Fisher.

"When the going gets weird, the weird get going." Anne McTeague.

"Have fun while you work in school, don't get caught up in your work so that you don't enjoy life." Mary Villarruel.

"School at times seems tough, but keep on working hard and you'll make it." Pat Pashich.

"Be sure to keep a one mile radius between yourself and La Salle." Rosanne Ramos.

"You shouldn't waste your time as a freshman, sophomore or junior. Start thinking about your future now, it'll make your senior year easier." Mary Dolan.

"Never be late for Ms. Losue's classes and always be in perfect uniform in Mrs. Urbina's classes." Tracy First.

Seniors Stand Out

Many high schools today are eliminating the Senior Personality section from their yearbooks, claiming that it is nothing more than a popularity contest. However, many Alverno seniors feel that picking personalities is important because each one personifies the class as a whole. "In all of us, there is a little bit of each personality; some seniors are key symbols of each quality," stated Mary Dolan.

In carrying out the traditional nomination and election of senior personalities, the seniors had a chance to acknowledge those who stood out in their class.

A Touch Of Class

February 6th became the day when seniors would find out if their crash dieting was all worth while as they tried out for the annual Senior Style Show. Michele Steger stated that she, "was totally nervous" and "felt relieved" after it was all over.

The judging panel consisting of Ms. Marion Peterson, Ms. Barbara Brown, Ms. Emily John, Sr. Barbara Mullen, Mrs. Betty Quayle, Mrs. Marcia Urbina and Ms. Carla Tomaso, who chose 15 models and two alternates for the occasion. When asked what the judges were looking for, Mrs. Lana Craig, style show coordinator, replied: "Posture, appearance, and movement." Selected as models were Mary Klein, Lourdes Vita, Cheryl Lindsey, Liz Garcia, Susie Fisher, Veronica Ferrante, Kirsten Reinhart, Sharon Moscarel, Suzy Stearns, Vicky Scott, Michele Steger, Cindy Clark, Beth Louapre, Beth Rettig, Pia Perez, Claudine Harkness and Ann Howells.

As in the past years, Bullock's of Pasadena would sponsor the show titled "A Touch of Class" and a brunch. With the assistance of a store representative, the 17 models were able to browse and preview styles ranging from sunny, tropical sportswear to long, romantic formals.

The 1981 Prom Court: Terera Cintron, Laura Ruggles, Lourdes Vito, Laura Geraci, Mary O'Donnell, Cheryl Lindsey. Princess Mary O'Donnell replied that she "was surprised and it was totally unexpected."

Royalty

Even though most of the Prom responsibilities were handed over to the Junior Class, the seniors were not totally out of the organization process. Seniors traditionally decided upon the place of the Prom and the class officers chose the Universal Sheraton to be the site. The price of the bid proved to be a sign of the times at 45 dollars, almost double from last year. Other costs went for dresses, hair appointments and a boutonniere.

Prom worries didn't end with the financial aspect, but on finding the date. Such was the case for many juniors and seniors. Court princess Teresa Cintron confided that, "The most traumatic experience in my life is having to ask a guy out, I just can't do it." The Good Old Days 1, ERA 0.

Giving That Little Extra

For many seniors, getting through high school with just B's and C's was good enough. Others tried to do the best job they could by studying and earning high grades. This hard work did not go unnoticed, as many of these seniors received awards for their outstanding scholastic achievement.

Bank of America departmental awards were given to 10 outstanding seniors. Two of these seniors received plaques and the remaining eight were awarded certificates. The winners were determined by each department on the basis of grade point average, class participation, and interest and potential in the field.

When the awards were announced, Anne McTeague commented, "I was shocked. It doesn't fit my image; I'll have to start wearing glasses."

◆ The certificates for English and Foreign Language were awarded to Margie Gear and to Maria Ramirez. Maria spoke out on the fact that she liked being able to speak two languages and to be able to communicate with different people.

◆ Presented to Mary O'Donnell and Anne McTeague were the certificates for Music and Social Sciences. Mary has participated in La Salle's productions and has been involved in Alverno's glee club and stage production.

Reminiscing Brings Anticipation

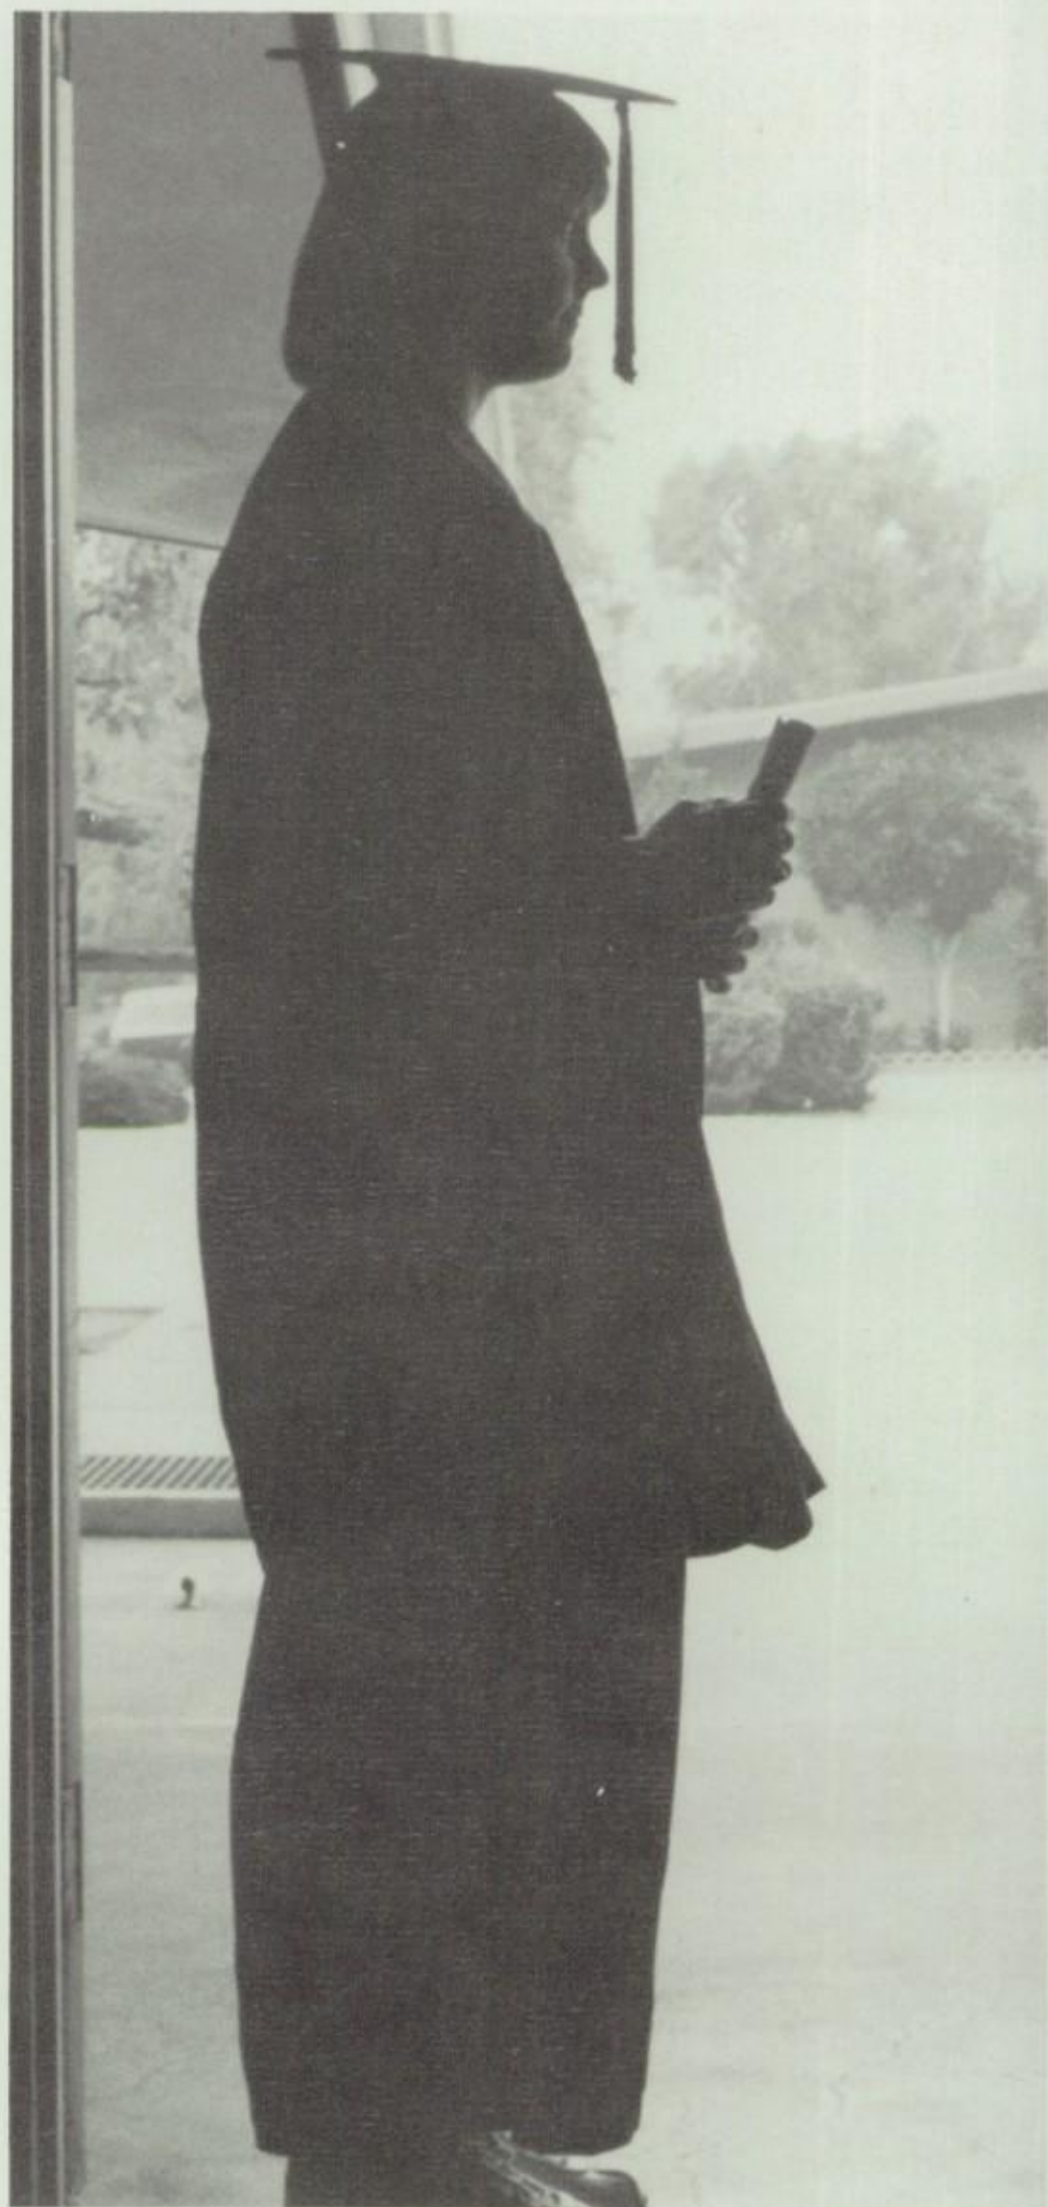

Standing on the threshold of adulthood-and not at all sure they wanted to be there-was the general feeling of seniors as they approached graduation.

Nearing graduation brought the thought of losing friends for many. "I'm really going to miss my friends," stated Rosie Zalamia, "the memories I have could never be relived." Friendships formed through high school naturally split as many leave for college; but a special bond would always be felt.

Memories of past years still brought conversation and jokes. As freshmen, "learning the ropes" of high school was a challenge. Major events began sophomore year with the famous Cherry Blossom. Planning the Ring Ceremony and the Prom brought agonizing financial obligations as well as countless rewards. Beth Rettig summed it up by stating, "I think we've always had something to look forward to, as each event was bigger and more important."

It wasn't long until "senioritis" hit the class. It was a time of filling up a schedule with art classes, getting the uncontrollable urge to stay home and see the outcome of General Hospital, breaking out in hives over SAT scores, and sending out graduation announcements to great-aunts and other relatives you've never even met.

Through the hard work, fun, frustrations and success, memories were to be cherished. Stacy Beaudet responded, "I've learned so much from high school, through good and bad experiences."

▲ Trying on a cap and gown gives Jenny Tweddle a chance to reminisce about her high school years. Many seniors had mixed feelings towards graduation.

◆ Wendy Slavin and Mary Dolan take time out from their studies to do some chatting. Seniors were often found on the terrace discussing future plans and ideas as well as helping each other with "sticky" problems.

◆ Pat Pashich takes a "breather" from an exam that she studied late for. Exams continued even though excuses of, "But we're graduating!" bombarded the teachers. School work progressed, proving to be exhausting yet worthwhile.

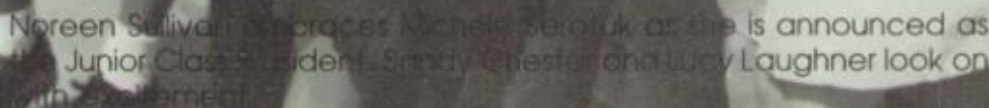

▲ Valerie Cooper stands on a chair to measure Maria Broussinos for her cap and gown. Such preparations for graduation made the big event seem "real", although there was much work still to be done such as planning the style show, passing final exams and setting up for the baccalaureate mass.

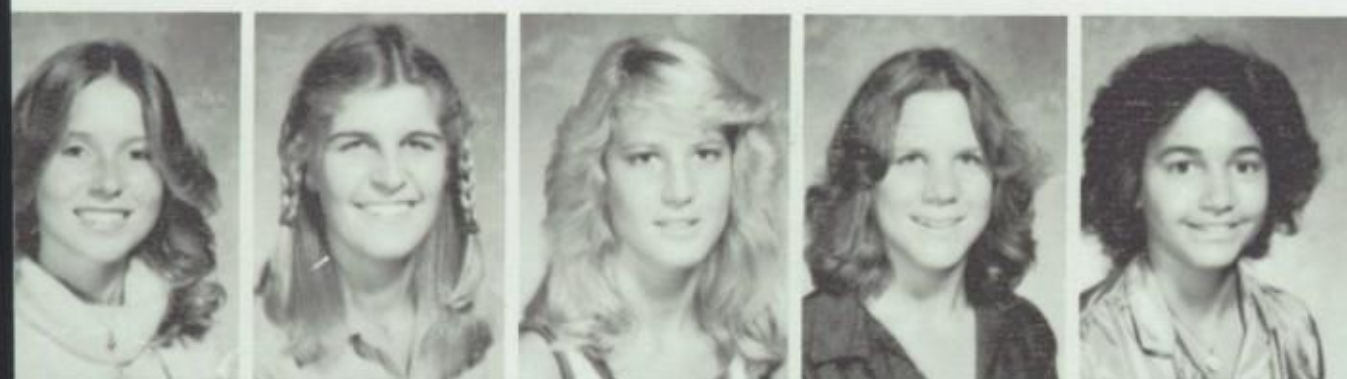

▲ As Sue Reilly empties her locker for the last time, she reminisces about the four years of hard work she leaves behind.

Noreen Sullivan expressed her goals for the challenging year ahead. "I want everyone to have a fantastic year, to work together and build up lasting friendships." Michele Serotuk agreed that being president was a challenge but added, "I'm excited about planning the prom and working with the girls in our class. We all have a terrific amount of school spirit and class participation." Michele felt that these were the two major aspects that made the Junior Class special and unique.

Originality And Uniqueness Shine In Class Symbol

A class symbol is chosen to represent the personality and uniqueness of each class. The Junior Class chose the dragon to express their originality and creativity. They wanted to be different from all the other classes and the dragon symbolized their strength and determination to do so.

In a poll, however, it was found that 40% of the girls did not vote for the dragon while 60% did. Yet, when asked how the dragon best symbolized the Junior Class, everyone agreed that it represents originality and uniqueness. One junior wrote, "Our class is willing to try new ways of doing things rather than approaching them the same dried out way of other classes. Our class isn't afraid to speak up . . . like the dragon, we don't throw smoke, we throw fire!"

A dragon is defined as "a huge, fierce animal like a snake or lizard with wings, claws and scales." Many of the girls didn't think the dragon was an appropriate symbol due to its physical features. However, the dragon was chosen for the qualities it possessed rather than its appearance.

The "Dragon Patrol" Strikes Again

It all began on Wednesday, November 26. The time-11:00 a.m. The Thanksgiving assembly was about to begin. As the students were gathering, they noticed something out of the ordinary and they seemed to ask themselves, "Why are the juniors wearing Indian headbands with feathers? Was I supposed to?" This crazy act was the work of the secret "Junior Dragon Patrol." Unknown to everyone except the juniors, the Dragon Patrol made sure that the class of '82 stood out among the other students. There were no specific leaders of this "committee" but there were a few girls who had the idea and organized the special yet small activities. The main function of the Dragon Patrol was to assure that the juniors' spirit and enthusiasm would stand out in the student body. Another was to unify the class more so than before. So, it wasn't surprising to find a poster, a banner or a junior wearing something extra because the Dragon Patrol had been working in mysterious ways.

The Junior Class also expressed their enthusiasm by bringing in the most food for the St. Francis food drive in November and trying their best to outdo the cheers of the other classes in occasional pep rallies.

Thus, their spirit had been proven to be an effective way of building a more unified Junior Class.

◆ Suzanne Sumner reveals her hidden enthusiasm by being a cheerleader. Like her, everyone has their "wild and crazy" side.

Juniors Make Dollars And Cent

It was a tough year for the Junior Class. They were kept busy with the responsibility of raising enough money for the ring ceremony and the Junior-Senior Prom. The class officers asked for fund raising ideas and the responses resulted in a Shakeys night and a record raffel which together brought in $127.00. This money plus that from a bake sale was put toward the ring ceremony which cost approximately $250.00. After this event, the juniors needed to start over and raise between $3,000 and $4,000 for a prom. The traditional candy sale brought in over $2,500 and over $150 was raised at the Christmas Boutique in which the juniors participated. An additional $600.00 was raised when the juniors took part in decorating a float for the Rose Parade. Jeri Ann Bycott's mother organized this fund raiser because she had been working with the Float-masters, a float production company, for three years. This new activity took alot of hard work and it was very time consuming yet one junior commetted, "It was tedious work but we had a lot of fun while doing it."

Juniors Create Lasting Friendships

"The perfect friend is a person who does not talk behind your back, doesn't lie to you but most of all, doesn't desert you when you really need her. A perfect friend is open to other points of view and loves you for what you are!" These feelings summed up what the Junior Class felt describes the perfect friend.

Over the past three years, the juniors have formed and created lasting friendships with each other. In a Troubadour staff survey, all of the girls agreed that their new friendships will last past high school. When asked what their group of friends enjoyed doing best, 80% of the responses were going to parties, shopping, and going to movies. Yet as in every close friendship, friends like to get together and spend time talking and having fun doing crazy things. Below are some of the funny and crazy events which took place over these past years.

Having an ice-cream fight in a hospital office.

Babysitting a cat at St. Rita's convent for a few days.

Floating wood pieces down the gutter in the pouring rain.

Sneaking into a friend's house and scaring her out of her wits.

Having water balloon/shaving cream fights.

Crashing a LaSalle Track team party and being the only four girls there.

Miming a band using pans, a tennis racket, an ironing board and a spoon for a microphone.

The Junior Class felt that friendships, no matter how new or old are always to be cherished and never forgotten.

Mary Noonan, JerAnn Bycott, Gen. Sen. and Stephanie Lopez began their friendship during their early years of high school. They usually were found during break on the terrace laughing and joking around.

The class of '83 returned from summer vacation with new friends, new experiences and with a new title: Sophomores.

As the Sophomores anxiously gathered on the first day of school they reminisced about their summer activities. "The Hawaiian Islands were beautiful and I would love to do it all over again," commented Dani Tarquinio. Some sophomores spent their summer in academic and recreational camps and resorts, while others made frequent trips to the beach.

The new brown uniforms and schedules were also a topic of discussion during the first few days of the new year. "I dislike the fabric of our uniforms but the style is ok," claimed Rosann Volmert. In general the sophomores preferred last years uniforms and schedules.

But now that they were sophomores, they naturally looked ahead to February and the traditional Cherry Blossom. Finding a date was one of the big but fun worries which was approaching the new 10th graders.

However, they had to face the present reality: Getting to Mrs. Hoffman's biology class!

Officers Strive For Class Unity

"My plans for improving our class are to get everyone more involved in school and class activities," commented Julie Kane (pres.). Together with the other officers, Apple Daza (vice-pres.); Carol Cummings (treas.); and Elena Cazares (sec.), Julie planned to execute a successful bake sale, christmas boutique and of course, the Cherry Blossom.

When the officers were asked why they ran for office, they all agreed it was because they felt they were qualified and wanted to become more involved with the class as a whole. Elena Cazares added, "I felt it was a challenge but I knew I could do it."

Growing closer together and working towards a successful year was what Carol Cummings enjoyed the most. As a whole class we have grown so much closer together, and I'm happy I could be a part of it."

One of the most important jobs was the planning and organization of the Cherry Blossom. Fund raisers, decorations and finding a band were the usual obstacles that had to be overcome in order to make the dance enjoyable.

Throught the year, the officers felt they had put the sophomores' ideas into action. Most importantly they felt that they had succeeded in uniting the sophomores as a class.

Sophomores Follow Tradition

It was really no surprise. The sophomores entered the year with their traditional job: "the chairs."

Like many sophomore classes before them, these girls had the opportunity to challenge their ability and muscle power in setting up and taking down chairs for assemblies.

After their first day out on the job, a Troubadour staff poll was taken. The class was asked how they felt about following in the tradition of setting up chairs? 82% of the sophomores wanted to continue with the tradition, while 18% did not.

"Doing the chairs is only fair. Everyone before us did it and everyone after us will. Following tradition is fun," commented Anne Grisbach. On the other hand Sandra Henkels felt that freshmen should have the "privilege." Together the entire Sophomore Class showed a skill at their teamwork by using the assembly line technique.

Finally the job was done. With great relief the sophomores passed down this privilege.

Kirtika Patel, Monica Nava and Miss Tomaso work together in straightening the chairs. Many of the sophomores felt that following tradition was fair but would be glad it was over.

Sophomores Prepare For The Pit

"Preparing for the Cherry Blossom is the main activity of the year for the sophomores," stated Alyssa Ramsby.

Because there was so much involved in pulling off a successful dance, the sophomores organized several committees. Among them were band, food, and decoration committees. The different groups showed their interest in a successful dance by planning, meeting and carrying out the ideas suggested by the class.

Joanna Mancini, a member of the band committee stated that they interviewed several bands and after a few interviews came to a final decision. The committee of 7 members together with Ms. Emily John, booked the band, Clone.

Loretta Reyes, Beverley Marshall and Janet Maez, some members of the decorations committee felt that being involved in decorations was fun. Loretta commented, "It gives me a chance to show and carry out my creativity." The decorations committee met one to three times a week at first and then they transformed their ideas into reality on the day before the dance. Their agenda consisted of choosing colors, picking floral arrangements, pricing and ordering extras like area rugs, curtains and a gazebo.

The 18 member food committee was in charge of refreshments. Committee head, Elena Cazares said that the group was looking into many things. "We have to order a cake and are looking into a catering service for the occasion." In addition to worrying about the preparations for the dance many sophomores had other concerns; finding a date and a dress were among these.

▲ Claudia De La Flor feels receiving her license is one responsibility she does not mind having. However, it didn't take sophomores long to find that a car could be used as effective leverage by parents to maintain good grades.

Sophs + Drivers License = Fun

Mustang, Mercedes, M.G., RXZ, Bug, BMW and Datsun 280-Z were some of the cars the sophomores were expecting to receive when they began to drive. (Of course, what they would receive was a different matter!)

When a Troubadour survey was taken, the girls were asked if they were going to get their license before the end of the sophomore year. 90% would and were very happy about it, while the other 10% had to wait until after June for their 16th birthday.

Cynthia Kremer planned to receive her own car when she got her license, as did 56% of the Sophomore Class. The other 44% would have some type of access to a car. "When I get my license, my sister and I will be sharing a car," stated Ingrid Uyemura.

Overall, most of the girls looked forward to the privilege of driving and the freedom a car would provide. One sophomore summed up the feelings of almost everyone when she said, "I don't care what kind of car I get as long as it runs!"

▲ Eye catching album covers, as well as good music, helped sell albums to music loving teenagers. During the recession the music industry did all it could to keep selling records.

It's Rock Or It's Nothing At All

Since the social lives of the sophomores was restrained by a tight budget and limited transportation many found easily accessible entertainment in popular music. In a survey taken among the sophomores, rock was overwhelmingly the most popular type of music, followed by new wave, disco and finally mellow.

This survey also revealed that 75% of the students spent $0-$10, 15% spent $10-$20 and the other 10% spent over $20 a month on records and tapes. This amount varied depending upon where people bought records and if they were on sale.

Some of the different places the girls attended to listen to live music were the Ice House, Starwood, Troubadour and Marilyn's Backstreet Disco. Of the sophomores who enjoyed going out to these night spots, most of them stated that they attended shows two to three times a month.

The girls were willing to travel to see well known as well as less known bands such as Oingo Boingo. Rides from boyfriends, friends and parents were among the methods girls without drivers licenses used to get to concerts. Some of the famous names they went to see were: Devo, Led Zepplin, AC/DC, Pat Benatar and Van Halen. Some favorite but unknown groups they would travel to see were: Clone, City Lights, Smile and The J.J.'s.

Elena Sclafani stated, "I would, if I had to, wait all night or day to see my favorite group, Devo. I'd even travel as far as San Diego." Liz Arreaga expressed similar feelings. "I would travel almost anywhere in California to see my favorite group, The Cars."

Neil Young summed it up best. "My, my, hey, hey, rock 'n' roll is here to stay!"

Paula Brennan and Leslie are looking at the current issue of Creem magazine which featured a story on Van Halen. Only a small number of sophomores read any kind of rock music magazines.

A Freshman Is . . .

"A little person in a big pond," is what freshman, Jeanette Archambault replied to the question "What is a Freshman?" When upperclassmen were asked the same question, however, they expressed somewhat different feelings, like . . .

"Still reads Teen-Beat Magazine."

"Knocks on the door of a classroom to get in."

"Knows the whole Alma Mater."

"They were cool when we were them, but, not anymore."

"Someone you can pick on."

"A student who feels the blow from changing from a hot-shot eighth grader, to a bottom of the line ninth grader."

"Eats lunch in the cafeteria."

"Wears either no make-up, or too much."

"They're pretty friendly and eager to be someone's friend."

"Has an organized folder, and doesn't scribble on it."

"Obeys the rules, sometimes they lack individuality, they're too conforming."

"They're so afraid of everybody that they're nice!"

Frosh Develop After Hour Activities

"What did I do after school when I was a freshman? I went home, did my homework, and watched T.V.," recalled a junior.

A typical day for freshmen today was tough. But, what happened after school was out? For most, their school day continued, as many claimed to have spent two, three, or even four hours after school on homework.

Most, however, had many other interests and hobbies to keep them busy, such as: cheerleading, dog showing, drawing, gardening, and jazz dancing. Barbara James said that she spent some of her free hours "guy watching" and "phone talking."

Some freshmen were involved in youth groups at their churches which on weekends, participated in dances, roller skating, and youth masses.

Freshmen Take Office

"Striving to reach the top," and, "Just being the best!" were some of the goals the freshman class officers had. Throughout the year, Yvette Pardo (pres.); Monique Williams (vice-pres.); Kelley Johnson (sec.); and Rayette Brown (treas.) met with their moderator Miss Linda Germany, to plan activities. One of their goals was to get a D.J. for a dance, a new activity for freshmen.

When asked if they would possibly run again in the future, the officers weren't sure, as it had been "a lot of work," said Kelley Johnson. For Rayette Brown, her position as class treasurer was good experience towards her goal of becoming an accountant.

The girls ran for office for various reasons, all hoping to make a difference and have, above all, a fun year.

Spirit Needs Time

Being new at Alverno, the freshmen were not used to the enthusiasm shared by all the returning students. Mary Finton, a junior, commented, "The freshmen have spirit, but they need to get involved, such as attending the games and participating in extracurricular activities." Only 38% of the freshmen felt that they had enough spirit to carry them through the year, while the remaining 62% felt they did not. Susan Emerson reflected, "More support from the upper grades would really pep-up the Freshmen Class." Maureen Murphy summed it up best. "All we need is a little more time."

A strong feeling expressed by freshmen was the need for more activities. Yvette Pardo suggested, "We should get crazy and have a picnic." Bake sales, dances and more rallies were other suggestions. Another aspect which the freshmen felt dampened their enthusiasm, was their inability to unite. Tonya Foote summed it up; "I would get excited but hardly anyone else does."

Their school spirit was displayed in other areas, such as the walk-a-thon theme song and dances. Their participation in dances, which was 77%, showed that they had either school spirit or a keen interest in La Salle boys.

Freshmen Exercise Opinions

Running, bumping, throwing and exercising were some of the activities of the mandatory P.E. class. When asked, 35% of the freshmen felt that P.E. should not be mandatory. Denise Tinker commented, "Some people do not like sports activities and should not be forced to participate in this class."

Some, however, said they would have taken it anyway since physical exercise is a necessity. As an alternative to everyday sports, the aerobic dance class assured the freshmen of good exercise routines, such as warm-ups, cardio-vascular exercises and relaxation techniques to finish up. Although it was tough learning the routines, the freshman class enjoyed the dancing as well as the sports activities. Gem Marie Gonzales commented, "The dance class is fun; it helps me relax and it's a change from sports."

◆ Agnes Paladino, Maria Lesaca, Michele Beresford and Diana Echeverry watch while an aerobic dance was being performed by fellow students. A 4 day a week P.E. class was a change for most freshman from a 1 day a week class in grade school.

Although sitting on the terrace has always been forbidden, Renee Gutierrez sneaks a drink. The indulgence of many freshmen let them get into such vices for awhile.

It's Just The Beginning

The freshmen finally made it to high school after all those years in grade school. They could chew gum without being told to throw it in the trash. Also, makeup could be worn without teachers making them wash it off. Dances were a new thing too. It felt good to know that the guy who asked you to dance was either your age or older, not younger.

Along with all the good things, the freshmen had to adjust to the less pleasing ones. They were at the bottom, no longer big 8th graders. Becky Flores said, "It was like we fell to the bottom of a long ladder." They also had to adjust to the new system at Alverno. Classes, friends, and finals were only a few changes. To many of the freshmen the major change was the absence of guys. Cindy Danne stated that "people asked me why I would want to go to an all girls school?"

Those who stuck it out with all the "good" and "bad", had next year to look forward to. Freshmen said they were looking forward to parties as well as dances, the Cherry Blossom and driving. The thing they looked forward to most was moving up that high school ladder and being able to "knock around next years freshmen!"

SINGULAR SENSATION ONE SINGULAR SENSATION

Alverno's faculty, anticipating the students' needs of the future, were able to improve and explore various academic areas. Mrs. Shelia Hoffman, science teacher, commented, "The new oceanography class was an expansion of the required biology. It was for those who wished to explore a specific area of biology." This, in turn, provided the students with insight into opportunities in continued education or work in a competitive world.

Students were exposed to challenges such as achieving good grades. Yet, the faculty paid special attention to and encouraged the students' creativity and expression. Patty Martinez explained, "The fun that I have in some classes eases the tension of school work." ✍️

♦ Junior Emily Telles scrambles for her notes during her U.S. History class. Mrs. Heukrodt used video tapes to help bring historical eras to life.

Administration Speaks Out

Sr. Madeline Clancey, C.S.J. and Ms. Barbara Brown were the heart of the administration. Together, they worked vigorously to build unity and independence for the entire student body.

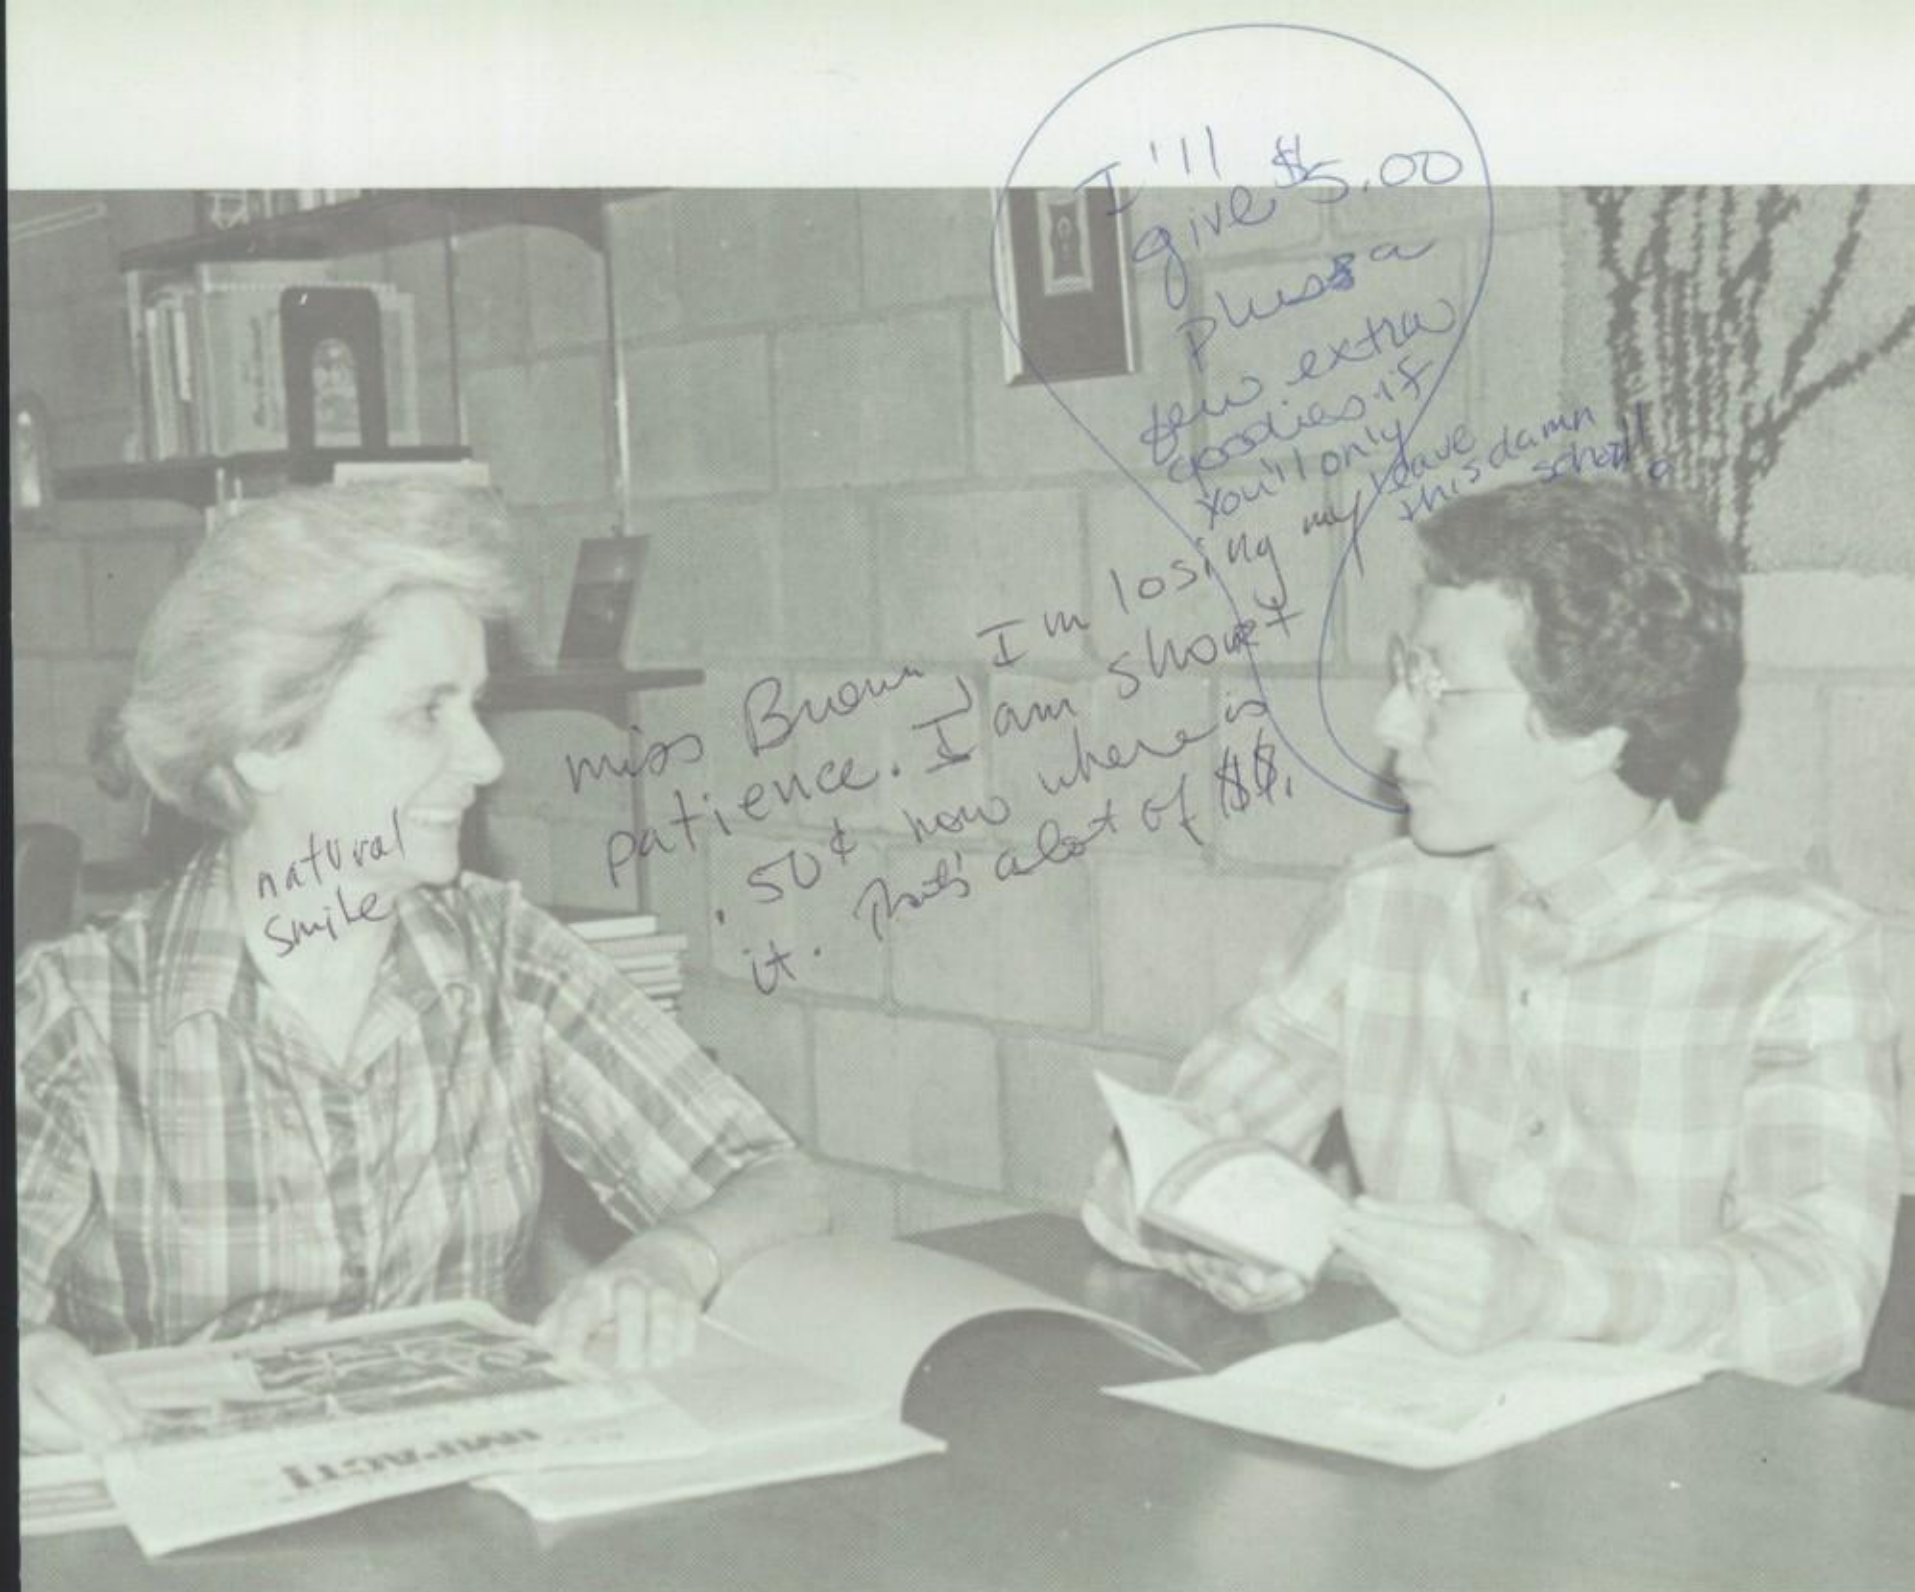

Sr. Madeline, in her second year as principal, expressed a desire to return to teaching chemistry and physics. Her optimistic goals this year were, "to continue to develop program studies by working with teachers and students on their educational goals and to give the students opportunities to appreciate each other."

Ms. Brown had been here thirteen years and noticed that the students had become more serious in terms of studying. Some of her goals were to have everyone's behavior improve so that blue slips would not exist. This could be accomplished by making the students become aware of and practice self-discipline. She also expressed an interest for unscheduled time to be used wisely. When asked if she missed teaching, she smile and commented, "Yes, but I don't miss correcting papers." ✍️

▲ In constant demand, Ms. Brown takes time out to help Betsy Winegart. Counseling and scheduling are just a few of the things that make up Ms. Brown's day.

▲ Although continually busy, Sr. Madeline takes time to meet with students regarding school work and future goals. Lilliana Troya gets help on a school project.

◆ Meetings to discuss school progress and student awareness are an important part of administration. Sr. Madeline and Ms. Brown meet to discuss the latest events concerning the school.

◆ Sr. Madeline handles one of the many calls from parents. Coordinating parent and student needs is a large part of her job.

Teachers Enjoy Diversified Hobbies

In addition to being devoted instructors, teachers occupied their spare time working with assorted hobbies. Once the clocks struck 2:20 the teachers were free to get involved with their hobbies. Most teachers spent time with such out-of-school activities as cooking, sewing, art and physical fitness. Mrs. Marcia Urbina had a flair for folkdancing while Sister Ruth Marie Ingram O.S.F. and Ms. Angela Bonja enjoyed crochet and macramé. Mrs. Lana Craig spent over twelve hours a week at the YWCA, practicing and instructing gymnastics, as well as going to Nautilus Weight Training three times a week.

On the average, teachers spent from one to four hours a week working with their hobbies. Most of the hobbies originated from personal interest.

Miss Margret Redd attended adult education classes in order to learn the making of stained glass windows. To perfect old and new techniques, she attended classes continually throughout the year. Miss Redd made many things which she had given as gifts, in addition to things she had placed in her home.

When asked if making stained glass windows was difficult, she answered with a strong "yes!"

then added, "you can never do it when you are tired because you'll do it wrong." Then she stated that in order for the window to turn out perfect you must be very alert and patient for each step depends on the accuracy of the previous one.

Though Miss Redd specialized in lead glass and loose window styles, such as hanging windows, her current project was the base of a lamp.

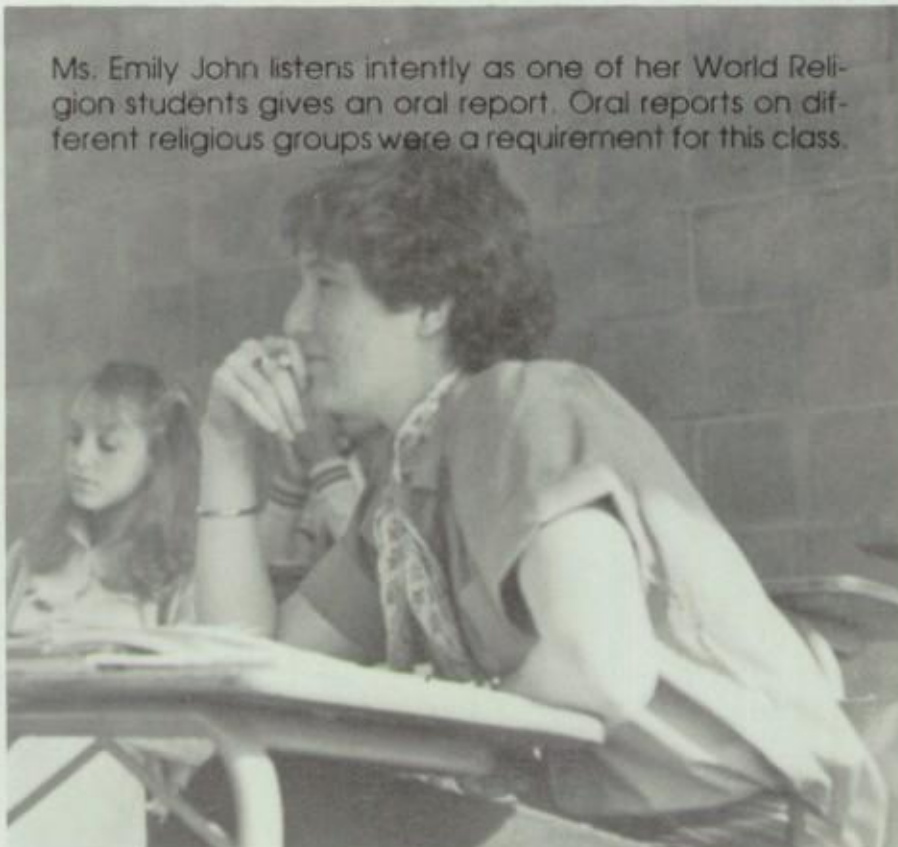

Hobbies can tell a lot about a person and so it's unfortunate that this side of the faculty was never seen at school.

Did You Ever Have To . . .

Students from all four classes were asked to sift through their past school years and recall any unusual assignments they had been given. Many quickly filled out their surveys with a wide variety of creative assignments and the following are some of their recollections.

"Draw a picture of a bedroom."
 "Bring mushrooms to class."
 "Perform a toga dance to 'Whip It.'"
 "Draw a picture with typing keys."
 "Pretend to be a member of the opposite sex."
 "Write with twigs."

"Count the square tiles of a classroom."
 "Spy on mother for two hours and report."
 "Fake having P.E."
 "Pretend to be a rat to be used in an experiment."
 "Rewrite a scene of 'Gone With the Wind' to the 50's."
 "Tell what it would be like to swallow a gold fish."
 "Analyze a child's movements."
 "Write while listening to music."
 "Pretend to be one of the chemical elements and do a dance."
 "Give a theory on how to explain the facts of life to a nine year old child."

 "Build a model of an atom with candy and toothpicks."
 "Do a fashion show with greek clothing."
 "Imagine being in another existence."
 "Bring a joke to class."
 "Pretend to be an ant and go through a peach pit."

As these assignments were recalled, so were the entertainment and interest experienced. They were a source of enrichment to classes, as well as to students and teachers.

Staff Is A Key Element

An important part of making a school function properly were the people who worked on staff. The new faces on staff were Sr. Joanne Connors I.H.M., who worked in the office, and Mr. Ed Hicks who worked in the cafeteria preparing lunch for hungry students. Mrs. Betty Quayle, though she's been a staff member for 3 years, took on the new position of being the Advancement Director.

Before coming to Alverno, Sr. Joanne worked as a chaplain at Queen of the Valley Hospital. She stated "I like working here very much, I find it to be a challenge. I especially like the aliveness and the spirit the girls have had the learning process that's taking place. I find it a wonderful experience."

Mr. Hicks was the food and beverage director at the Best Western Gala Motel. He responded, "It's crazy; it's pleasant; there's no pressure and the girls are very nice."

Mr. Mike Chaplin, president of the Parents Association as well as vice-president Donald Schimmoller, treasurer John Floryan and secretary Rosali Barili, had many festivities planned, such as the steak fry and square dance planned for spring.

Bingo, the biggest fund raiser, was held on Monday nights and brought in an average of 125 people to play and approximately $25,000 at the end of the year. Academics Changing And Rearranging

Art

The Art Department decreased not only in classes and teachers, but in the number of students as well. Craft Design, Basic Art and Advanced Art were once again offered and the only new class was Art Awareness. This program was added to give a sense of the purpose and history of the art of man to each student.

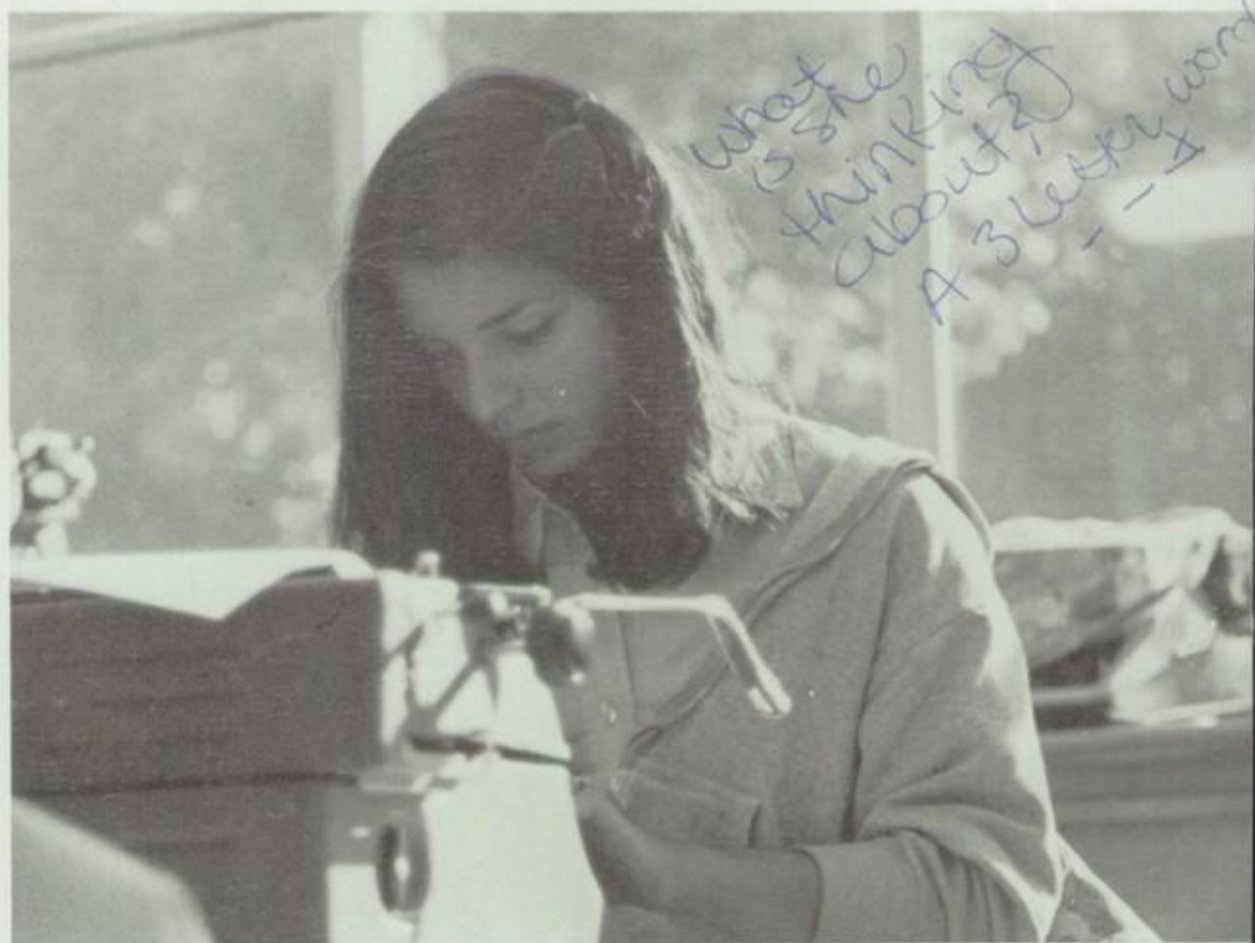

A decrease in student enrollment in the art courses resulted in a smaller number of classes. Students found it difficult to fit their choice of art course in their heavy schedule. Mrs. Pat MacDonald, the only teacher in the department, seemed to be optimistic. "The department ran as smoothly as ever, just on a smaller scale.

Business

In addition to Typing I and II and Accounting, the Business Department expanded by adding a Shorthand class. Students took dictations, performed drills and reading exercises. Many of the students discovered that this class required as many as two or three hours of homework each night. Emphasis was placed on skills because students would have use for them in careers or school; thus much practice was necessary.

New typing equipment consisted of four IBM Correcting Selectric Typewriters. The department paid approximately $800 for each of these machines because "they were the best made", stated Mr. John Otten, the department's only teacher. "I think Typing II was a challenge because it furthered my ability in the business world", said a junior.

▲ Creativity is an important part of any art course. Araceli Zarate displays one of the types of masks which art students are required to make.

▲ Concentrating on a business letter, Laura Nochella keeps her eyes on the typewriter. Concentration is a necessity in order to perform well in the course. One junior in Typing II says, "Without concentration, your fingers go crazy!"

♥ Through the use of small group instruction, Ms. Angela Bonja explains grammar techniques to her freshmen students. Both grammar and literature is stressed in the department, especially for the freshmen.

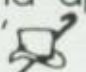

English

Modern and Classical Novels were two new classes added to the English Department. The students enrolled read and discussed novels both in class and individually. Reports were an important part of these two courses as the students researched and reported on the novels they read. In addition to literature, freshmen were required to take a grammar course. This new method supplied them with a solid base for upperclass english courses.

Sr. Regina Shaughnessy was the only new addition to the department. She taught sophomore and freshmen english as well as American and English Literature.

The overall emphasis of this department was placed on writing and reading skills to assure better performance in composition. When asked to comment, Ms. Linda Germany said, "The members of the English Department were dedicated to developing a strong foundation in writing skills and the understanding and appreciation of literature."

Foreign Language

The Foreign Language Department neither added nor deleted classes. Language offerings included Spanish and French, levels I through IV. Mrs. Nicole Hoffman tackled the job of teaching all of the French classes, while Ms. Pam Jones and Mrs. Lana Craig shared the responsibility of teaching the Spanish classes. Ms. Jones commented that her goal was, "To get students to acquire an understanding of the Spanish language and the people, to the point that they would want to continue studying the language, and understand that people are all alike, in spite of their language barriers." The classes covered the structure of the language as well as the cultural aspects.

Math

The Math Department added Computer Programming to its list of classes. Students worked with four micro computers and one printer computer. The classes consisted mainly of upper classmen. Several advantages of this new class were the actual experiences of working with computers and that led to more job opportunities.

Mrs. Barbara Zafonte was the new addition to the department, while Ms. Sally Kendall, P.E. teacher, picked up an Algebra I class. Mrs. Marcia Urbina was asked to comment on her goals as a teacher and she replied, "I want the majority of my students to develop a self-confidence in their ability to analyze math."

▲ Julie Scofield finds that Spanish I class is enjoyable as well as a lot of hard work. Spanish I classes concentrate on grammar to insure success in the upper courses.

▲ Computer Programming proves to be a different addition to the current courses. Geri Segal works intently on her calculations.

♥ P.E. classes encourage team effort and unity among the participants. Getting "warmed up" for an intramural volleyball game, the players practice setting the ball.

P.E.

Soccer, cross country and swimming were some extra-curricular sports cut from the budget of the P.E. Department due to inflation. Some continued activities were volleyball, aerobic dancing, badminton and basketball. The classes were basically full of freshmen, though there were some sophomore, junior and senior aids to help Miss Sally Kendall, the department's only instructor. When asked if she would join again if some of the deleted sports were re-instated, a junior replied, "Definitely. I enjoyed it last year."

▲ Students in Algebra I constantly work on solving equations. As Mrs. Barbara Zafonte explains the proper steps to take, students diligently take notes.

♥ Mrs. Susan Brice, a long term-substitute for Mrs. Kathy Heukrodt, elaborates on a correct answer for one of the U.S. History projects. Before coming to Alverno, Mrs. Brice worked as an instructional aide at Glendale High School.

Religion

At registration last spring, students were given a wide range of courses to choose from in the Religion Department. A total of 12 new courses were offered by the four members of the department. Ultimately, Death and Dying, World Religions and Religion in Work and Word were offered due to the positive student response at registration.

Death and Dying exposed the students to the hardships that are faced when a loved one dies, as well as the acceptance of death. Sr. Anne Korthals' goal for her class was "to show that death is only the other side of life."

Though World Religions was considered a new course, it had been offered two years ago. This class explored the beliefs in religions not only found in the United States but in foreign countries as well. Judaism, Hinduism, Buddhism and the sociology of other religions were explored.

As in previous years, a study of the Old Testament, Morality, What the Church Teaches, Christian Life Styles and Christian Service continued. ✍

Science

The Science Department added Oceanography, Earth Science and Astronomy to the list of courses which already consisted of Chemistry, Biology, Human Anatomy and Physiology. The new classes were welcomed by the students who showed great interest in these courses. Betsy Winegart thought that Oceanography would prove to be interesting and replied that "It would be fun since it deals with the beach."

Earth Science was an in-depth study of the earth's content and properties which cause areas to differ. Oceanography studied the make-up of the ocean, sea floor coverings and the animals that live in the sea water which covers almost 2/3 of our world. Along with class discussion and examination of sea life, the class took a trip to Dana Point to see the sea animals in their natural habitat. An explanation of stars and how they can be used in researching the history of the earth could be found in Ms. Margaret Redd's Astronomy class.

In summing up, Mrs. Sheila Hoffman hoped that the students would leave in June with pleasant feelings, of having had fun and with having learned some scientific concepts. ✍

Social Studies

Changes in the Social Studies Department ranged from adding classes to changing teachers. The new courses offered were American History Since 1945, Economics and Psychology.

American History Since 1945 dealt with the events that have occurred since the middle of the twentieth century. The Psychology class was the basic introduction to fundamental theories and techniques of the field. Specific areas related to Psychology were also covered including studies of abnormal psychology and child psychology.

Ms. Maria Iosue related the department's goals: "To show students the value of being informed about their society—past, present and future and to enrich social awareness throughout the campus." ✍

The pleasant weather afforded Miss Emily John the opportunity to teach her sophomore religion class on the terrace. "Having class outside helps me to think better and helps me to feel closer to God," was one student's reaction to the outdoor class.

With the big "choose life" sign on the back wall of the biology lab, sophomores listen to Mrs. Sheila Hoffman's lecture on mitosis. Biology laid the foundation for the elective science courses taken in the junior and senior years.

In order to share their common abilities and interests, Alverno students gathered in clubs, teams, and other organizations, staying until late hours of the afternoon for meetings and practices. Many of these girls wanted to be involved in the school because they "wanted to create unity and school spirit." Clubs and teams made Alverno more than just an 8:30 to 2:20 school. They gave students a chance to be involved in what interested them most. Susie Fisher said, "I enjoy Student Council because I can become more involved with students and faculty in order to promote a better school year." Others wanted to make use of their talents and abilities. Between songs during a drama practice, Karla Kurzweil stated, "Drama and Glee Club give me a chance to express myself. They also give me the opportunity to use my talents." Overall, the clubs and organizations gave students the chance to unite while they participated in extra-curricular activities.

A.S.B.

The Alverno Student Body Officers were the link between the faculty and the students. They had to find out what the students wanted and present the requests to Ms. Pam Jones, the A.S.B. moderator. Together, Ms. Jones and the five student body officers worked to carry out the expressed desires of the student body.

One of the first activities that the officers worked on was the Sadie Hawkins Dance. Their creativity was evident in the western facade of posters, hay, sawdust and a bar complete with saloon girls. The officers also worked on the first joint Christmas Dance with La Salle, the Sno-ball.

Officers Laura Ruggles, Lourdes Vita, Michele Lee Steger, Peggy Kinney and Kathy Bohler were responsible for coordinating the student activities on campus, and to continually search for new ideas.

When Michele Steger was asked if she would run again if she had the chance, she replied, "Yes I would definitely run again. It's been tough at times, but when an activity was successful and the students were happy it was worth the effort."

Social Chairperson Peggy Kinney was asked why she ran for office. "I ran for the office to open myself to classes other than seniors; kindle a school spirit of unity and improve communications on campus."

Building Spirit Physically

G.A.A.

The largest active organization on campus, G.A.A., "whipped it good", according to Barbera Fleming. Their slogan "whip it" expressed their incentive to rouse enthusiasm and participation in sports on campus.

The club's officers Kathy Bohler, Elvirita Vera, Amy Huber, Marialyce Pedersen, Carla Mathis and Mary Villarruel, worked with approximately forty-five other members on various activities throughout the year. During lunch time meetings in the P.E. room, club members planned bake sales, the Halloween Haunted House and the most exciting event for the G.A.A. was the spring Sports Awards Banquet.

When Kathy Bohler was asked to identify her club's goal she replied they wanted, "to promote school spirit, incite more involvement and enthusiasm, and to also to have more sports recognition on campus."

Letterman's Club

What exactly is a tradition? tradition (trə-dish'ən) n. 1. the handing down orally of customs, beliefs, etc., from generation to generation. 2. a story.

Letterman's Club had been a tradition until a few years ago when it was discontinued due to a lack of interest. Many of the girls involved with sports this year approached Coach Sally Kendall and asked to start this tradition again. They began by designing a sweater that was personalized with each member's name and year of graduation.

To be awarded the sweater a player had to have participated in five sports, all of them being a varsity sport. The club consisted of 12 members that elected Kelly McFaul and Jenny Tweddle to lead them to a productive year by working towards their goals of expanding the club and promoting spirit. ✎

Pepsters Promote Spirit

Cheerleaders

Pep was a lot more than just cheering at the games. There was much time, work and money that went into being a pepster. The girls started practicing after tryouts and continued to practice 2 - 3 hours each week during the year.

In preparation for a spirited year, the cheerleaders attended a summer camp to learn about new styles, chants and routines. At the end of the four days the squad won first place for the overall evaluations and also received one spirit star.

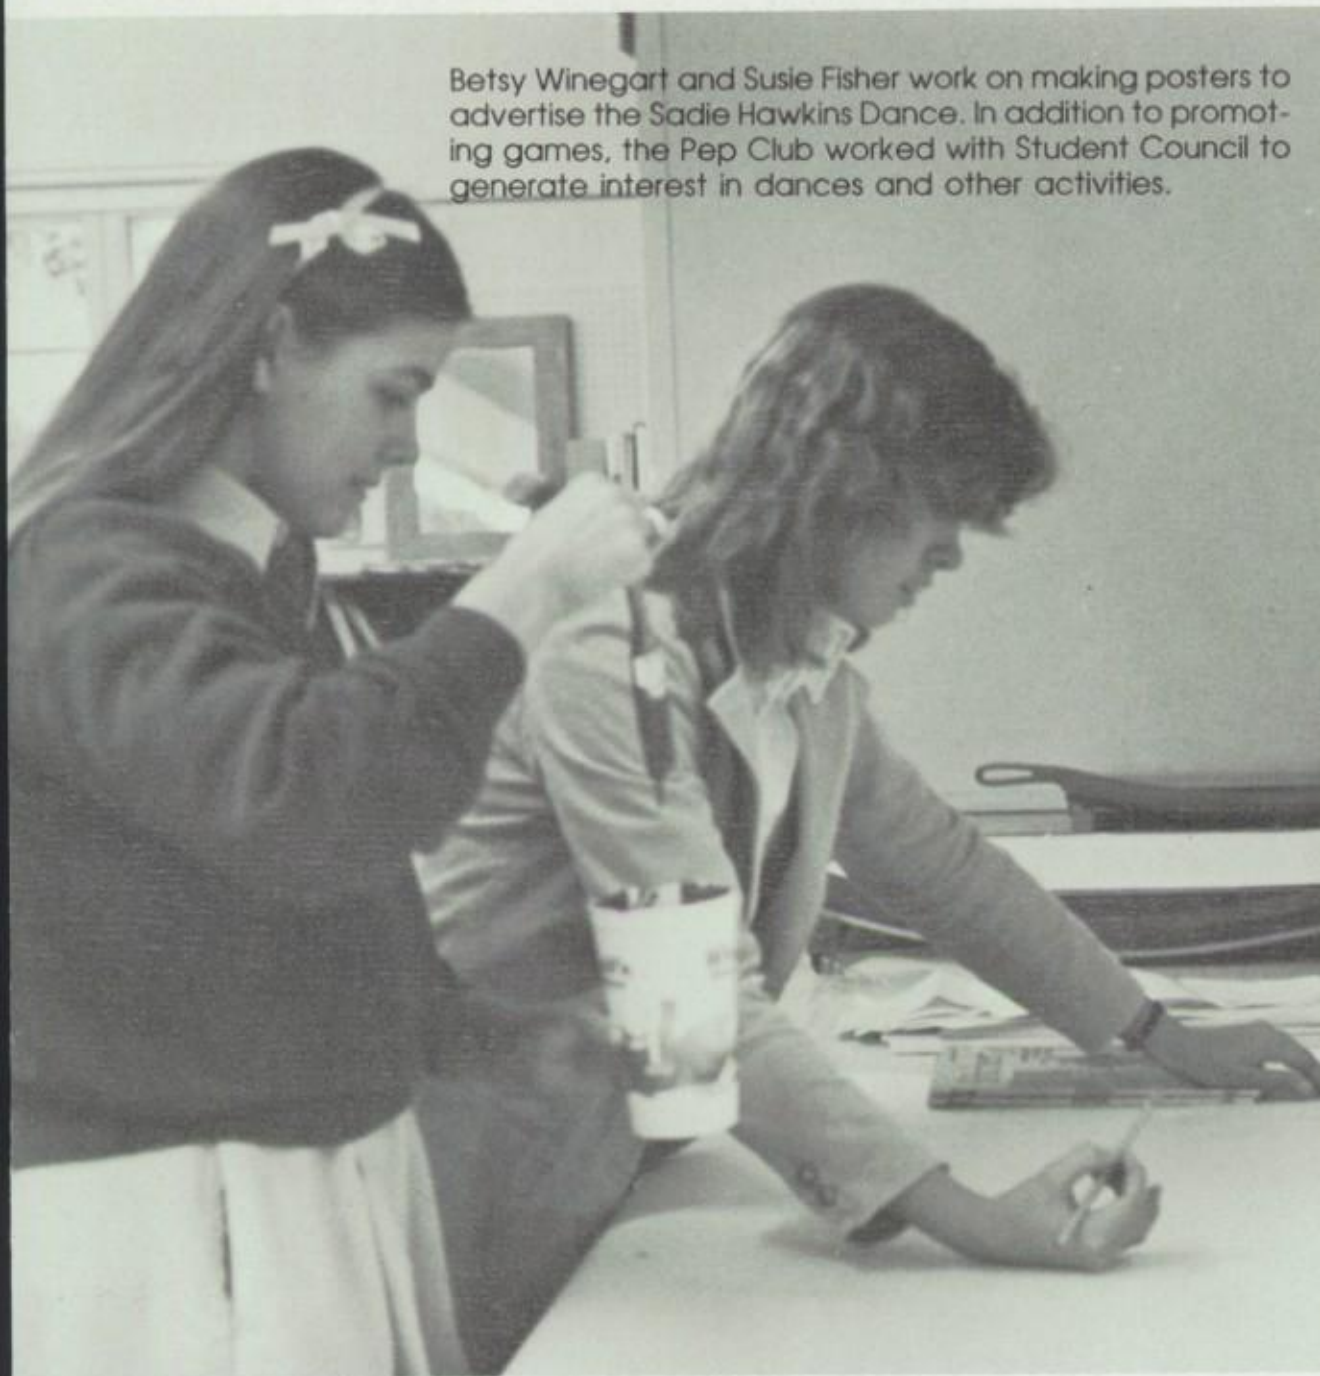

When asked about the squad's goals, Sue De Canio replied that they, "just wanted to continue to promote spirit here at school." ✂

◆ To encourage school spirit in September, the cheerleaders organized a pep rally. It was hoped that rallies like this one would increase attendance at games.

Betsy Winegart and Susie Fisher work on making posters to advertise the Sadie Hawkins Dance. In addition to promoting games, the Pep Club worked with Student Council to generate interest in dances and other activities.

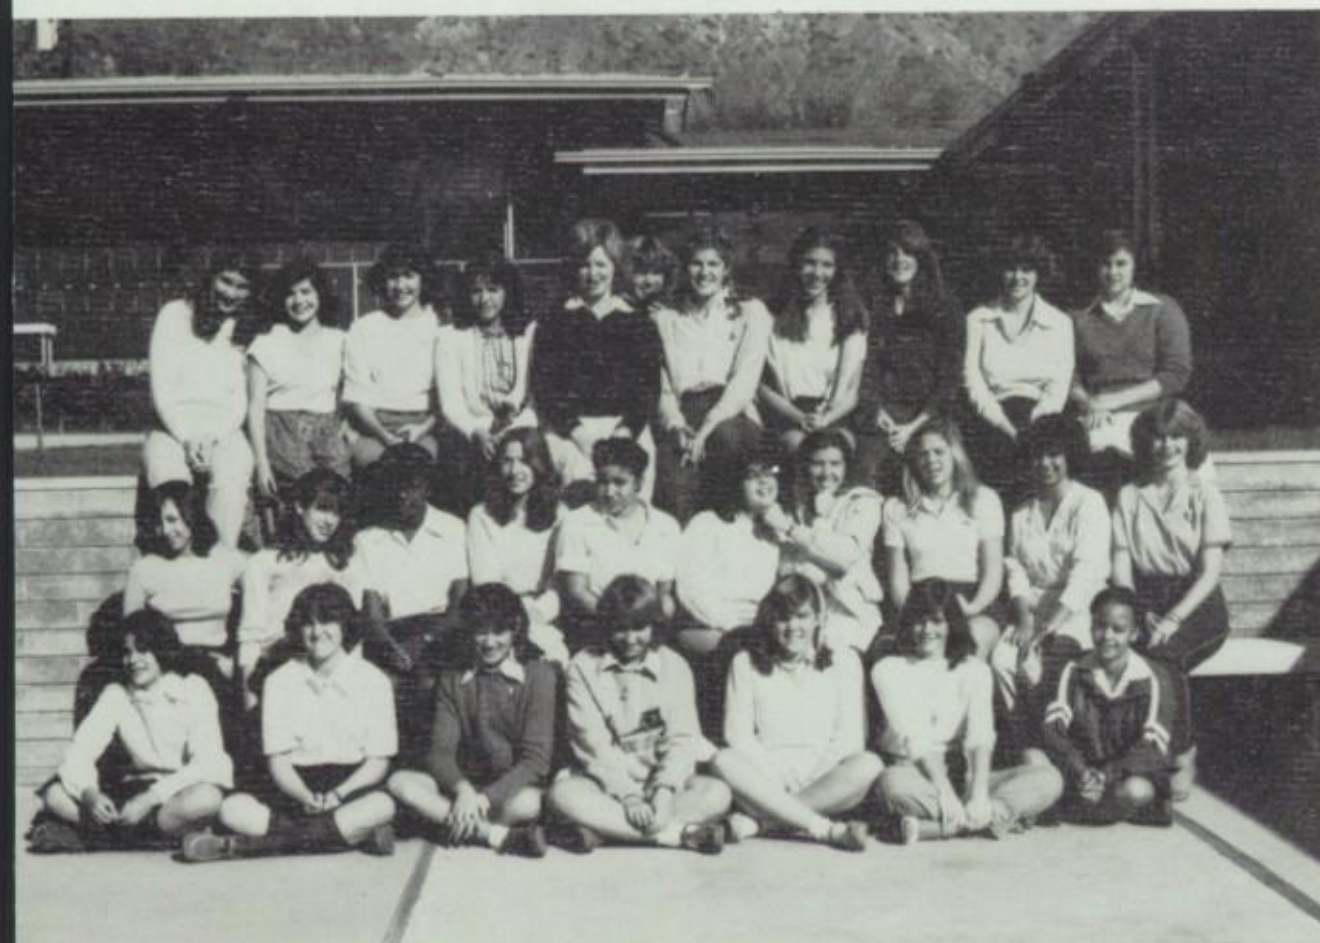

Pep Club

The Pep Club, headed by Sue Fisher, met in the artroom twice a month after school to discuss different ways in which to publicize new events, as well as to promote spirit on campus.

In order to increase attendance at the games, Sue Fisher stated, "that the more publicity we produce the greater the attendance."

The Pep Club's goal of generating spirit among the students and faculty, involved much work from the members. Sue DeCanio stated, "Through the vibrant posters and spreading of enthusiasm by the club, we were able to increase involvement of the student body."

Publications Press On

Margie Gear takes another peek at some of the items submitted for the Literary Magazine. Over 75 pieces were turned in, however, only 25 were used in the magazine.

Literary Magazine

The Literary Magazine, Renaissance, was a collection of original student work. This name was chosen because it meant the rebirth of classics, from the dark ages to modern times. The staff tried to bring out the rebirth of the imagination of the students.

For the two editors and adviser who put together the entire magazine, being involved meant a lot of hard work. Short stories, poems and art work were submitted to editors Margie Gear and Daria Mercurio and adviser Ms. Carla Tomaso through boxes in room 111 and the library. "We had no problem getting enough entries," stated Margie.

After all the entries were submitted, the editors and adviser got together and chose what would appear in the magazine. The Renaissance was distributed in the end of April, free of charge. ✍

Putting out typographical errors and pasting corrections over them, Delia Salido prepares her final copy. Copy, pictures and other elements were later pasted up to complete the layouts.

Newspaper Staff

Keeping their ears open and reading every bulletin were good journalistic habits learned by the Highlander staff. They collected the most interesting information from these sources to write stories for the newspaper. The staff then sat in room 1048 brainstorming in order to get the best ideas for articles. The real work began after they decided what they were going to write.

The Highlander staff met after school usually only four times a month, because all members worked at home writing their articles to meet their deadlines. Putting the paper together involved: taking pictures, interviewing people, writing articles and pasting up the pages.

It was hoped the paper would be published six times during the year. The Highlander was allotted $500 from A.S.B. to produce the newspaper. ✂

Is There Life After Deadline?

Yearbook Staff

Oh my gosh! We have a final deadline tomorrow! I've already missed the rough deadline. If I'm late on this one too Mrs. Bailey will kill me! Wait, let me make sure . . . I'm right. I have so much to do. Let's see, I have to finish my copy, headline and layout. I can't find the style sheets and I can't remember how to fit my headline! What am I going to do? All of this is going to be impossible to finish on time. No, I can do it if I stay up all night. Maybe I should call Kelly and ask her to come over and help me? I still have to crop my pictures and job stamp everything. Will I ever get through this deadline without dying first?? I'm so behind. . .

If you were a member of the Troubadour staff, these were a few of the many thoughts which went through your head just before a deadline. The staff consisted of 20 inexperienced but eager sophomores, juniors and seniors and a new adviser, Mrs. Kathi Bailey. To overcome their journalism inexperience, half of the staff attended a week long summer seminar at the University of California at San Diego.

"Our goal was to produce a creative and exciting record of the school year", stated Mrs. Bailey.

"When I signed up last June I didn't realize all the hours of work that would be involved, but I knew when the book would finally come, all the headaches, frustration and pressures would all seem worthwhile," commented a tired Ann Howells. ✍

Cropping with care, Kelly Willett selects pictures for her spread on the Glee Club. Equipment like croppers and grease pencils were never around when they were needed most.

After typing, Betsy Winegart inspects her work for mistakes. Because one of the new changes in the book was a story on every page, staff members found that much of their time was spent typing and proofreading.

Activities For Achievers

CSF/NHS

WOW!!! I received 4 A's and 2 B's now I can be on CSF and NHS! This will look great on my college applications. I'm so proud of myself."

The National Honor Society and the California Scholarship Federation were honor societies that consisted of those students who achieved a grade point average of 3.2 or better during a semester. Also students must complete at least two hours of responsible service per semester. For those students wishing to further their education this is a beneficial ingredient for their college application. Being a part of this organization helps students to qualify for local and national scholarships and grants.

Members met periodically in the Biology lab, with Jeanette Feeney the president. The goals for these clubs were to help the school to recognize honor students and to give these students a chance to become more active within their school by doing service hours and tutoring people who need it. When asked why she joined this club a junior said, "Because of the special advantages it has to offer, it will open up a better opportunity to get into college."

With some assistance from club president Jeanette Feeney, Patricia Pashich fills out her NHS application for the second semester as Stephanie Delgatto looks on. Being a life member helped Jeanette get accepted by prestigious colleges such as Marquette and Creighton.

Enjoying some harmonizing, Pam Gates, Jill Garrigan, Mary O'Donnell and Laura Gomez sing, "Give a Little Love at Christmas." These girls were chosen by Mrs. Reed to sing this selection because of their ability.

Just For The Fun Of It

Glee Club

"It's just a lot of fun, that's why I joined Glee Club," said Jeri Ann Bycott. Sue Webster commented that it helped to exercise her voice for her singing job. However, most girls joined the Glee Club because they just love to sing.

The Glee Club, which was also a class, met during third period in the Villa. The 26 members worked with Director Phyllis Reed to put on successful programs such as the Christmas assembly, carolling at Bullocks, entertainment at the Altadena Chamber of Commerce Dinner Dance and their Annual Variety Show in May.

Mrs. Reed's goal was to give the girls the opportunity to enjoy music and to use the skills they have learned in possible future careers.

▲ Sue Webster adds a moment of light comedy to the solo at the Christmas assembly. The Glee Club sang a variety of carols ranging from traditional religious songs to light-hearted contemporary ones.

◆ An audience of approximately 500 listens to the result of four weeks of practice. Students in the back of the cafeteria complained that they couldn't hear well because of poor acoustics and talking schoolmates.

Glee/Drama

"Where's my costume? Oh, geez! I only have two minutes before my cue to go on stage. I wish I had time to sit in the corner and go over the words to my solo."

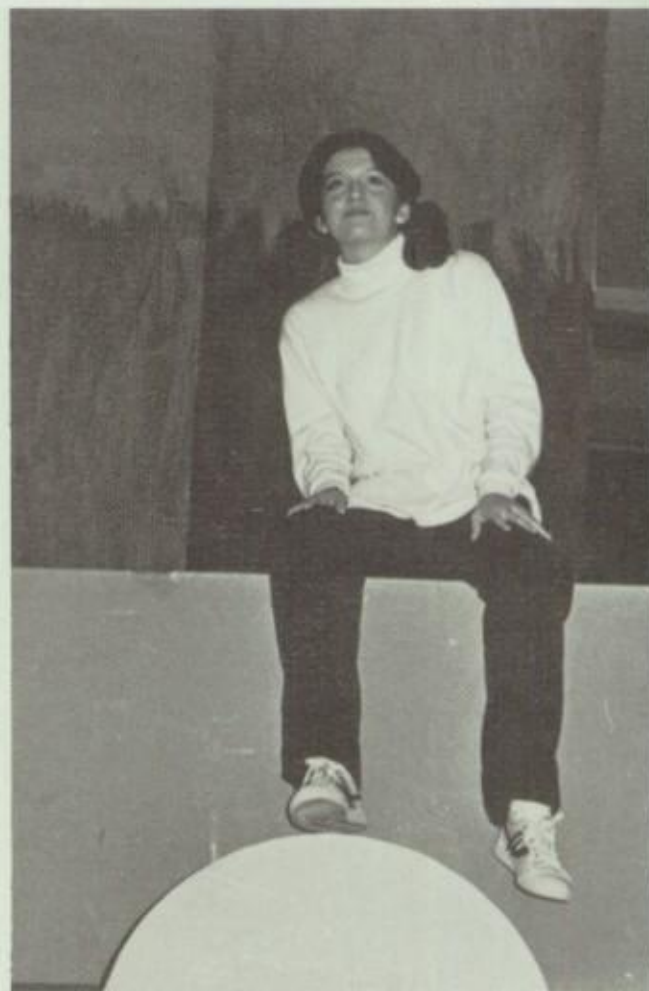

Students had a chance to show their talents in "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown," in the January drama production put on by the Glee Club. The cast spent many hours of hard work, practicing for opening night. The play was practiced at four elementary schools. Opening night was sold out to an audience of students, friends and relatives. Those who attended closing night enjoyed a dinner performance.

Supervisor Mrs. Phylles Reed musician Mrs. Kay Ott and choreographer Peter Lee Fields and the cast consisting of Charlie Brown (Mary O'Donnell), Lucy (Karla Kurzweil), Snoopy (Laura Gomez), Schroeder (Pam Kouba), Sally (Paige Johnson), Linus (Kathy Betz) and the entire chorus planned everything from sets to dinner for almost an entire semester. Paige Johnson stated, "I had a lot of fun even though it was lot of work. I really miss it."

These students in the spotlight gained a great deal of experience from their performance and in the process, entertained the community as well as the student body. "The acting was very good, they must have spent a long time working on the play and I really enjoyed it," stated Denise Arguijo. ✂

Skillful Techniques Aid Team

The Varsity and Junior Varsity teams ended their season with positive thoughts and "good feelings" despite their losing records. "We have achieved alot since last year," explained Beth Durr. "Our skills have improved alot. We were good but we just could not pull together." Varsity team member Mandy Downer felt that their great spirit and organization helped them through the season.

Coach Sally Kendall said that the record was not a true indicator of the girls actual abilities. For example, Kathy Bolher and Jessica Braud with the aid of Gina Daza and Michele Steger excelled in their execution of spiking and setting plays.

The Varsity squad had 1 freshman Liz Joyce. Her team members felt that it was a great acheivement for her to have made varsity.

Junior Varsity Coach John Otten said his team's 1-12 record did not reflect their "spirit." Even when the "chips were down" the enthusiasm of the players did not falter. "We'll get them next year," was Mr. Otten's final thought.

Determination Keeps Team Striving

Putting aside the many difficulties that the basketball team encountered, they managed to win 6 of 12 games, coming in fourth in their league and barely missing the playoffs by a couple points. In light of the problems, some players felt that this was a good record. "The loss of a couple good players affected the teams' performance," stated Julie Joyce.

Lost team members included Elvirita Vera, who had to withdraw due to a knee injury, Holly Edwards left due to academic reasons, and Karen Renald and Magi Dolen quit because of transportation problems. Barbara Thornhill stated, "The pressure of basketball was causing problems with my grades so I had to quit."

Forwards Mary Brkich and Amy Huber demonstrated excellence in the areas of scoring and rebounding. At the end of the season, Mary averaged 6 rebounds per game. Amy not only achieved 14 rebounds per game, but was the top scorer with 8 baskets and completed 50% of her free throws per game.

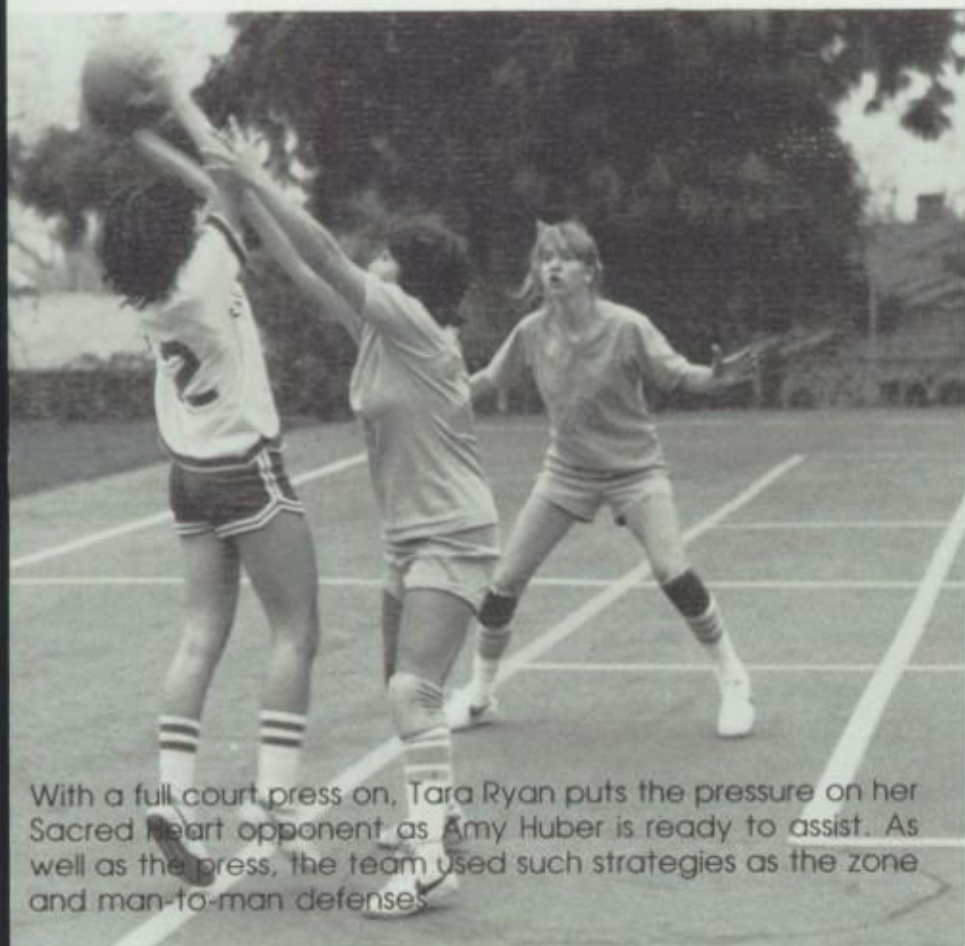

Coach John Otten felt that there were personality conflicts on the team. "I didn't expect the girls to like each other," stated Mr. Otten, "but once they got on the court I expected them to play as a team."

Thinking ahead, Mary Brkich commented, "We should have a good season next year. Only one player is leaving, so this year's experience will give us a head start for next year."

Going for a lay-up, Mary Villarruell warms up before a game. During an average practice, the girls had to complete 30 lay-ups.

With a full court press on, Tara Ryan puts the pressure on her Sacred Heart opponent as Amy Huber is ready to assist. As well as the press, the team used such strategies as the zone and man-to-man defenses.

Tennis Gets New Look

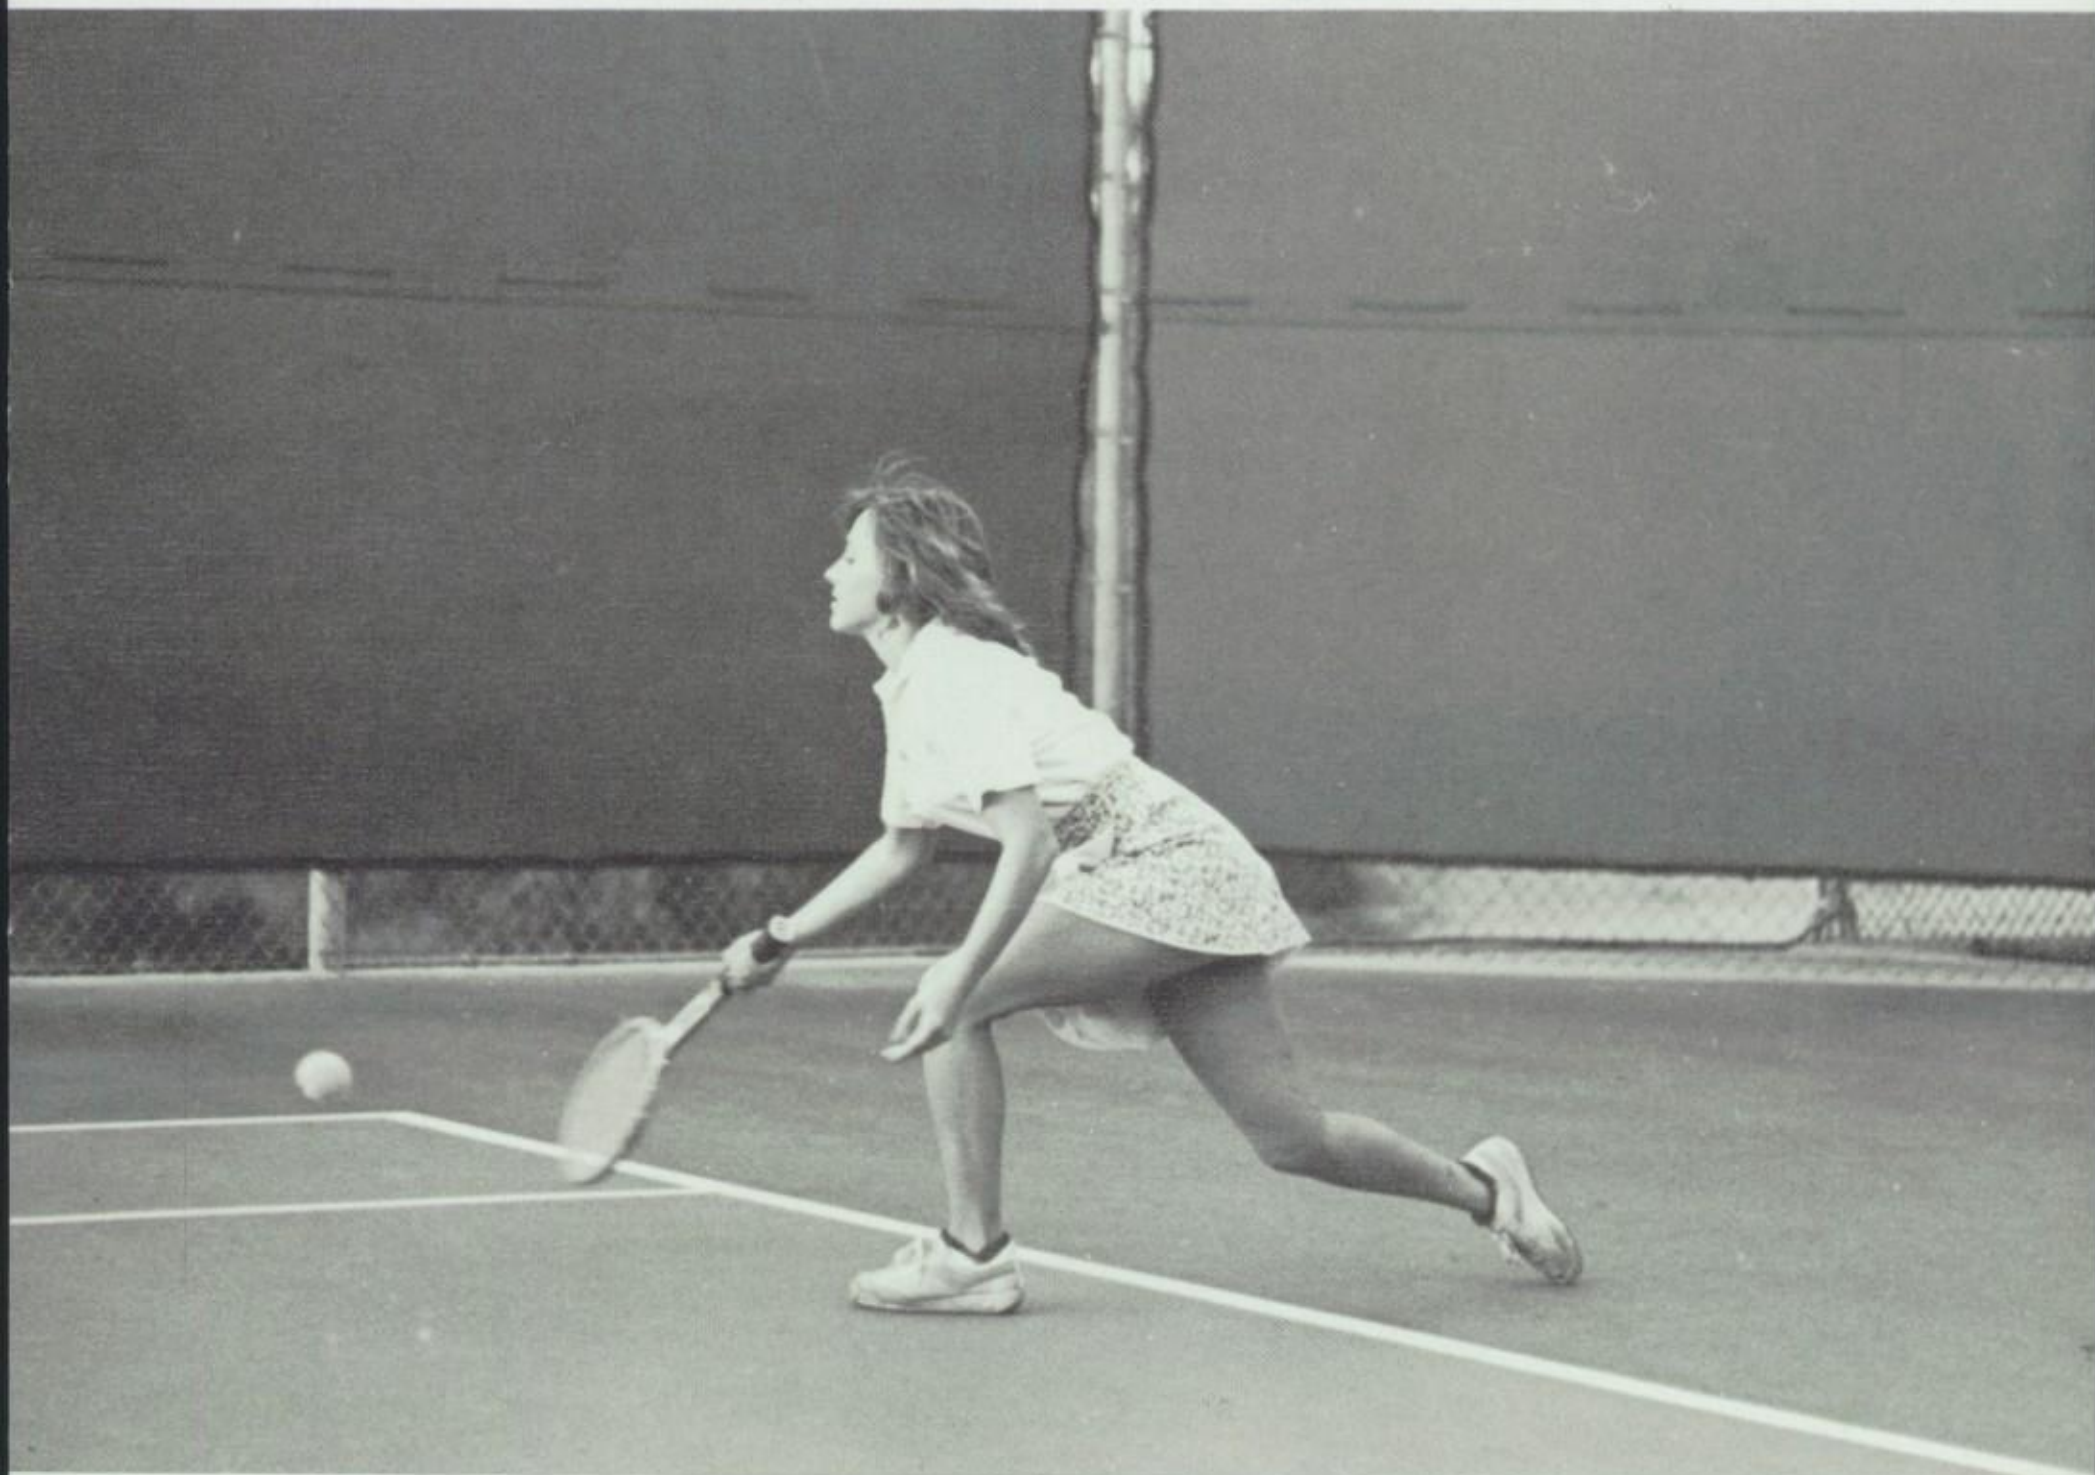

There was hope for Coach Carla Tomaso's team to capture first place in their league. "The team started out slow but improved as the season progressed," commented Anne Thurman. Because of a slow start Coach Tomaso changed her strategy. "We rearranged the singles and the doubles players in hopes of improving our record." Their strategy proved to be successful, resulting in a second place finish with a 3-3 record.

In addition to a new playing strategy, the squad had several new changes to help their spirit. "With a new coach, new uniforms and new tennis courts, we had a lot of spirit," Leslie Duerst said. "It was very enjoyable to practice on the new courts." commented Coach Tomaso.

Players still showed their enthusiasm for tennis even after the season ended. In the Westridge Invitational Tennis Tournament, Amy Huber and Barbara Thornhill won the doubles championship. "It was exciting and a great experience," commented Barbara.

▲ Concentration is the key as Cathy Deleo attempts to return an opponents serve. Although a senior, this was Cathy's first year on the team.

Springing Ahead With New Hopes

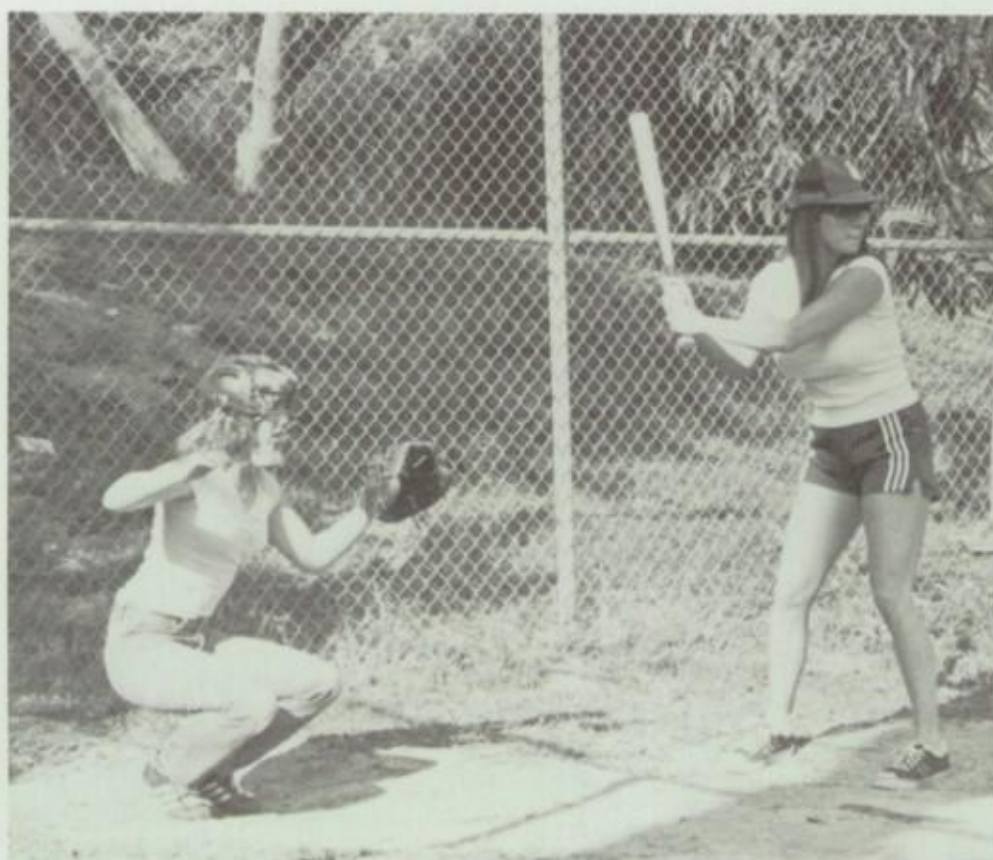

Softball Coach Kate Kendall was confident that the team would repeat their great performance of the previous season. With ten out of fifteen returning players, Coach Kendall stated that, "The team has great potential; the players are determined, enthusiastic and most importantly, are skilled.

The coach and teams' common goal was evident through their 2 ½ hour a day practices. The team was hoping to see sweep the entire league of small schools. The only difficulty the team faced this year was in orienting the new members to Ms. Kendall's coaching style.

"We all felt really positive about this year," stated Jennifer Tweddle.

▲ During tryouts, Coach Kate Kendall bats balls to a few of the 30 girls who tried out for the team. After the final cuts were made on February 19th, 15 girls were chosen.

Why Do They Do It?

Pressure. The dictionary defines it as, "a burdensome, distressing or weighty condition." Everyone faces pressure in their daily routine, ranging from remembering to buy gas to getting a big homework assignment done on time.

In addition to everyday stresses and strains, coaches faced other pressures, both physical and mental. "The psychological pressures involved with coaching are tremendous," stated Coach Sally Kendall, "but I do it because I love sports and I want to support the kids."

The four member coaching staff consisted of Volleyball Coach Sally Kendall, Basketball Coach John Otten, Softball Coach Kate Kendall and Tennis Coach Carla Tomaso. Coaches were involved in daily practices, planning game strategies and keeping the players' enthusiasm high. Coaches Sally Kendall, John Otten and Carla Tomaso taught a full load of classes and were involved in extra-curricular activities in addition to their coaching responsibilities; Ms. Kendall was the moderator for the Letterman's Club and GAA, Mr. Otten worked on the Board of Conduct and Ms. Tomaso worked on the School Committee and moderated the Literary Magazine publication.

The coaches all felt that although the pressures brought on by coaching were great, the rewards were worth the time and effort that coaching demanded.

While refereeing a game during practice, Coach Kendall calls a ball out of play. Coaches spent an average of two hours a day after school at practice.

Giving last minute instructions, Coach Otten sets up a play during the last two minutes of the game against Sacred Heart. Tight games like this one, which went into triple overtime, put extra pressure on Coach Otten and his team.

"Unofficial" Sports

Most people think of "sports" as organized team competition, however, according to the Webster Dictionary sports are defined as, "fun or play." Activities ranging from jogging to lifeguarding were a couple of activities which the students were involved in outside of school. (Of course, there were those such as Jane Fuller who preferred playing in the sprinklers!) A Troubadour staff poll found that 62% of the student body participated in some kind of "fun or play."

Some students took these after hours sports activities very seriously. Students practiced anywhere from 1 to 5 hours a day. Tanya Alexander enjoyed riding her horse on an average of 3 hours a day. This enables her to excel in horseback riding competition.

Those who were involved in other school activities enjoyed their activities just as much as those with serious ambitions. Pam Wilkins commented, "I enjoy jogging because it strengthens and firms up my legs." Janice Abraham stated, "Basketball isn't fun as a competitive sport, it's more fun just playing with other friends."

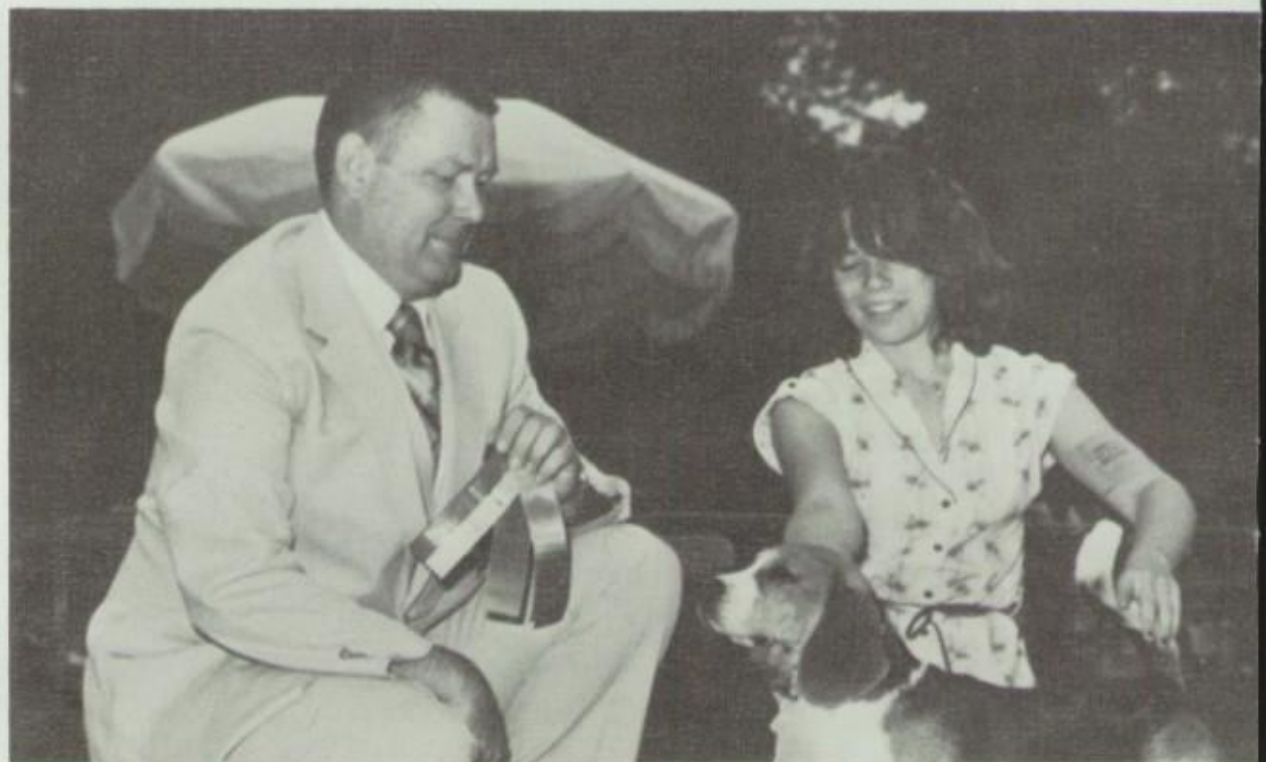

In addition to sports programs at school, the freshmen P.E. classes became involved in various tournaments. This allowed students the opportunity to experience team work without the serious competition of school sponsored sports. Using the P.E. classes as teams, the girls played badminton and volleyball.

The students also held an interest in jogging and rollerskating. 60% of these students enjoyed jogging, while only 32% liked rollerskating.

Other sports ranged from motorcycle riding to dog showing. The roughness of motorcycle riding only held the interest of 1% of the students. 13% of the student body participated in dog showing and horseback riding.

In all, outside sports provided the students with recreation as well as exercise. Kitty Eloed stated, "I like getting together with a group of friends and just having fun."

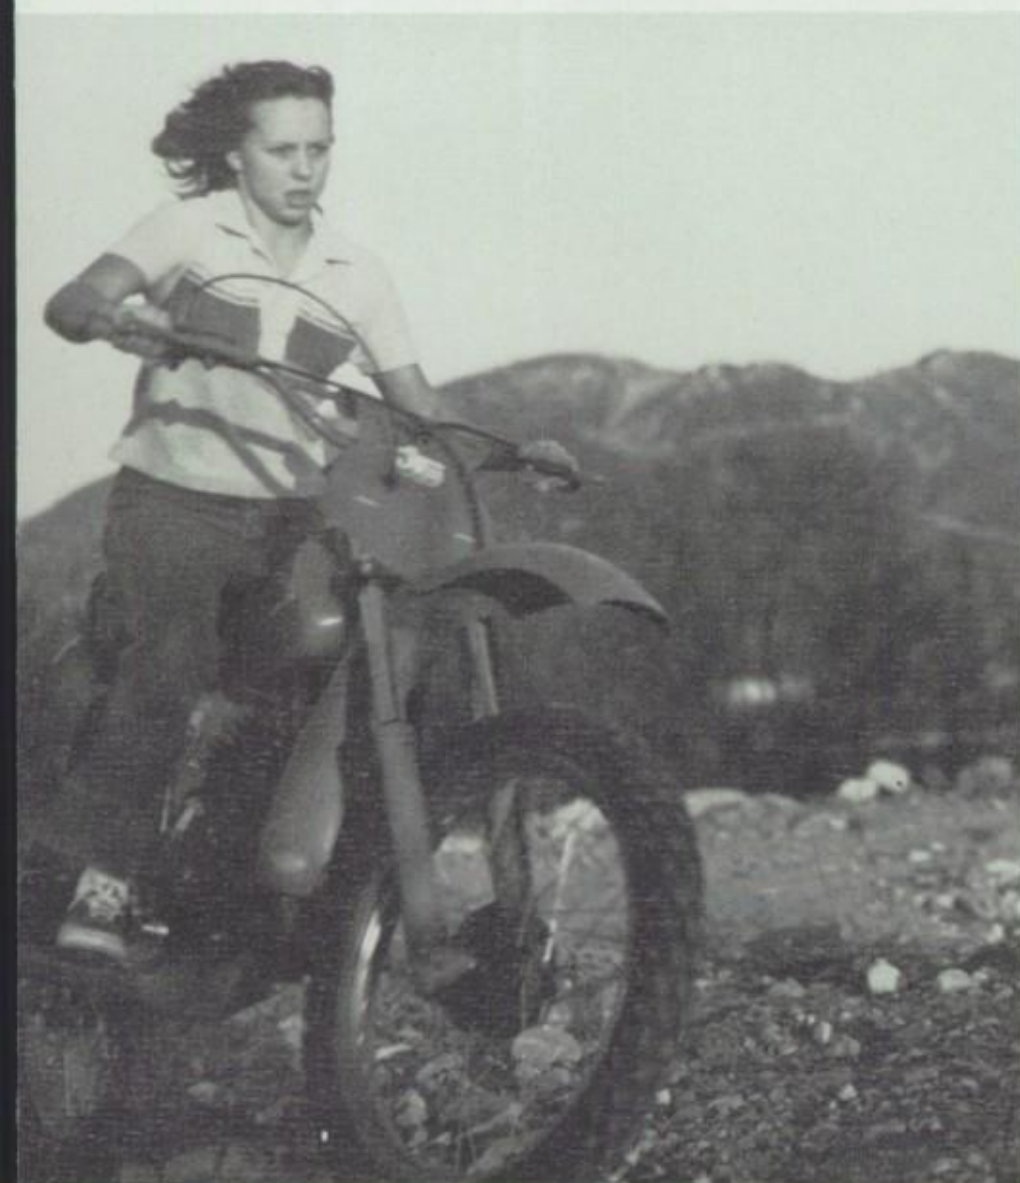

▲ Kim Johnson's beagle wins "Best of Winners" at a Pasadena dog show. She has been entering her dog in competition for the past 5 years.

◆ Motorcycle riding has been a favorite sport of Michelle Tickey since she was 9. She often rides in the Duarte Dam area because it's the best riding track around.

◆ Jackie DeClue practices her swimming at the P.H.S. pool. Over the summer, Jackie won six trophies at the Cal-Novice Finals, and she will be swimming for Alverno in the CIF competitions.

♥ Lali Alvarez, Rebecca Flores, Melinda Gambito, Maria Lesaca, Eileen McFadden, Elvirita Vera, Barbara Fleming and Michelle Coleman are winners of the Freshmen P.E. Volleyball Tournament. The teams consisting of P.E. aids and freshmen, played each other to determine the winner.

▲ Anna Rodriguez jogs three days a week. She says that jogging helps her work off tension.

◆ Susie Fisher and Betsy Winegart enjoy the sunny weather. Toward the end of the year, lunch areas were often converted into simulated beaches.

On her first day as principal, Dr. Broome addressed the students where she expressed her interest in them as individuals.

Wrapping It All Up

Where did it all go? From September 8th we counted 164 more school days, and finally, when May fell upon us, we replenished our summer wardrobes, made plans for frequent trips to the beach, and realized that those school days were now but a few. As we anxiously awaited a sizzling summer, we paused briefly to reminisce about the styles, fads, and changes which made the year one singular sensation.

We were "in to" designer jeans, the cowboy look, punk, preppie, and even casual sweat suits, and purple became the dominant color on campus. In our free time, we held French braiding sessions, sometimes achieving the "ba-zaar" look.

We decorated our cars, lockers, and books with stickers which claimed that we were "Too Hip". Whenever a problem came along, we would "Whip it", or "Blow it out". It was a "trip" when we had "days" of homework, and had to "jam" from school "Dazed and Confused". Once we had completed the work, things were "casual" again.

The year was loaded with changes. From uniforms to schedules to teachers, for the most part, we faced these changes successfully. One of the major changes was the arrival of a new principal. As Dr. Elizabeth Broome took over for Sr. Madeline Clancy between semesters, she was welcomingly greeted with banners, gifts and applause. Dr. Broome stated that she was interested in the students as individuals and expressed a desire to help students "become enriched in all areas of life." (The yearbook staff regrets not having further coverage on Dr. Broome, but due to deadline schedules, coverage could only be limited.)

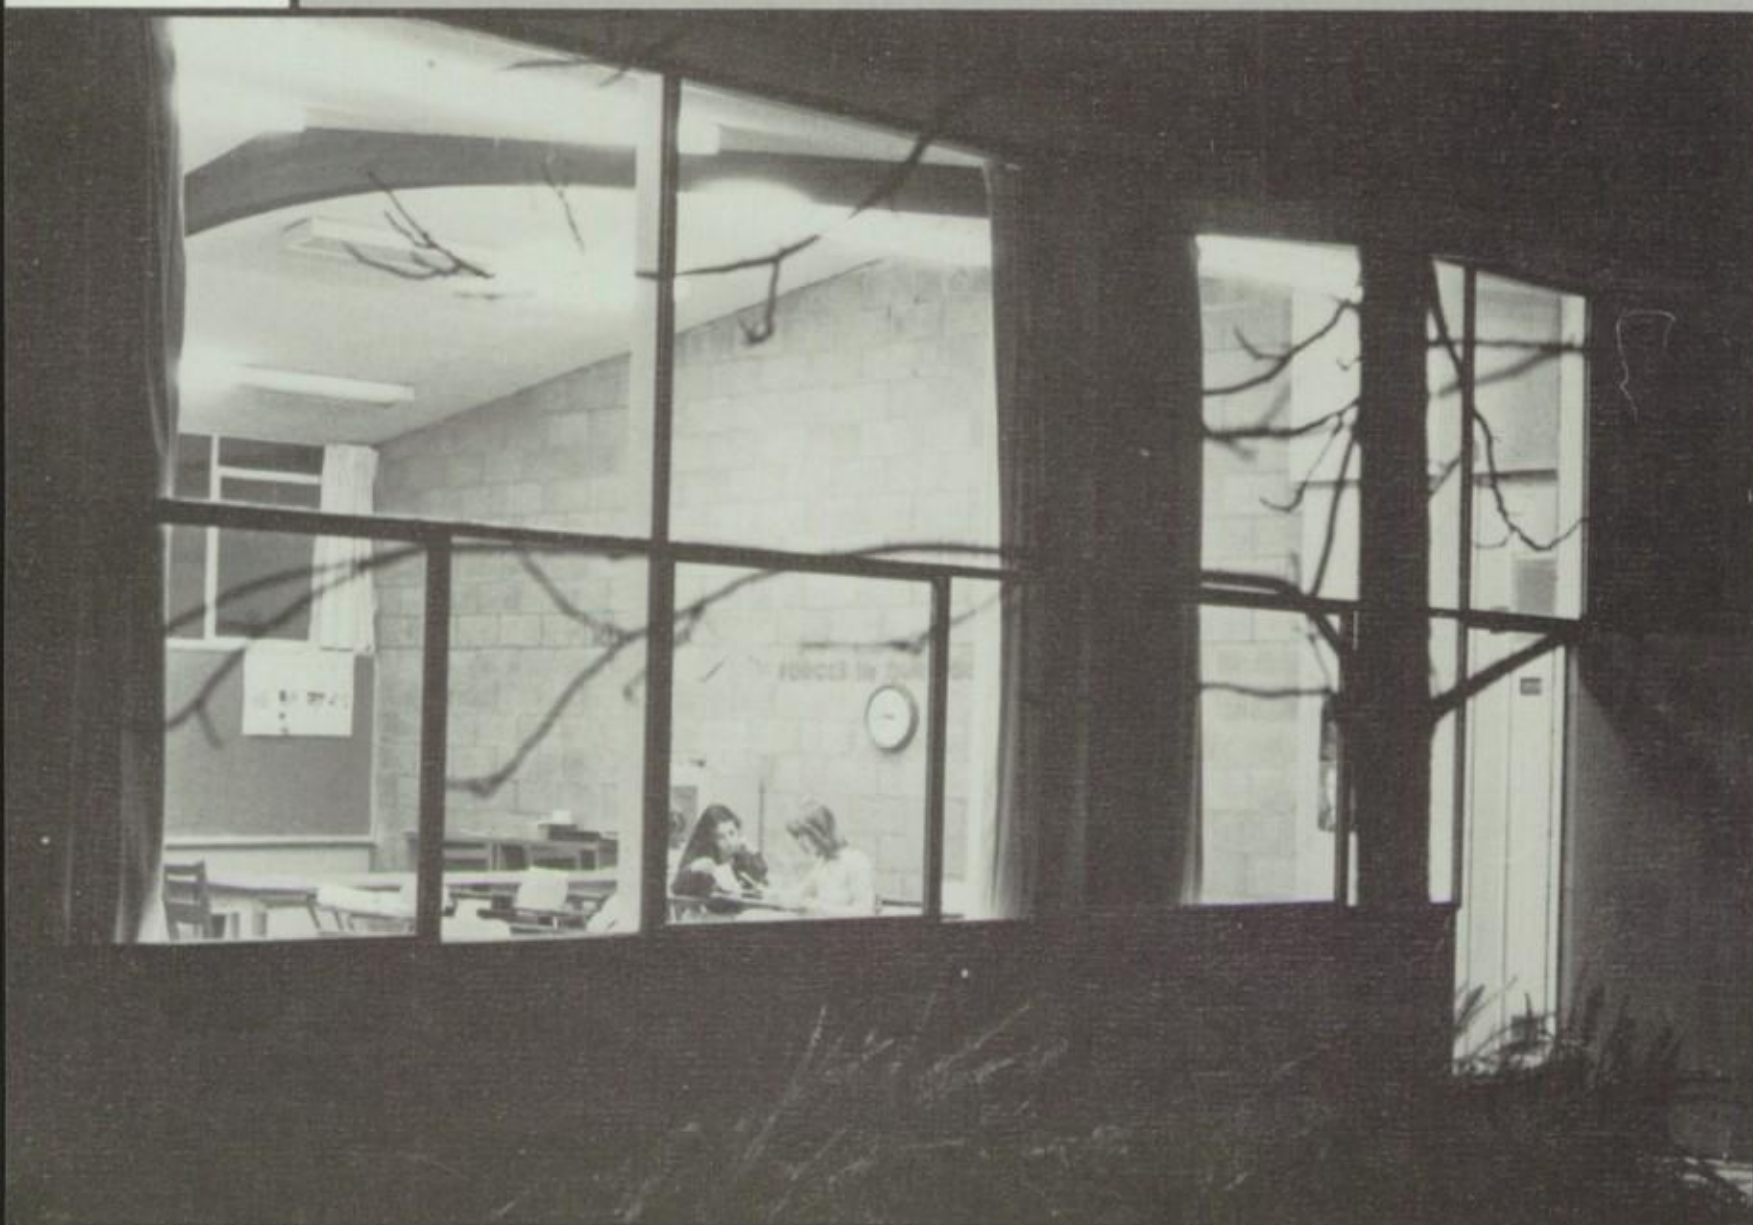

As we took those last books from our lockers, signed numerous yearbooks, counted the sacred days until next September, and said our "good-byes", we realized that through the year's styles, fads, and changes, 1980-81 had truly been One Singular Sensation.

▲ Like many activities, singing Christmas carols gave friends like Kelly Willett and Julie Kane a chance to share each other's companionship.

▲ Students celebrate the successful completion of the five mile December Walk-a-thon. Holding up fingers representing the number of years they have spent at Alverno, they show their class spirit.

▲ Being co-editors of the yearbook brought extra pressures and responsibilities for Maria Ramirez and Ann Howells. Working into the night was a common occurrence for staff members as they discovered that typing copy and drawing layouts always took longer than expected; work couldn't begin until 2:30 because yearbook was not a class.

Sacrifice & Support Bring Success

The yearbook staff had a goal. It was to produce a book with exciting new ideas and energy that would thrill everyone. We wanted to capture rare moments as well as traditional events.

We feel that our school was a singular sensation. The students and teachers made our goal successful through their cooperation and support and that was sensational.

Our success was achieved through the students' patient cooperation with countless surveys and polls. The teachers are also to be thanked for letting us pull students out of class to take those important pictures.

We owe a special thanks to our adviser Mrs. Bailey who spent countless hours in room 107 and even more at home correcting layouts and copy. Through her dedication to the yearbook we were able to survive times of agony.

Thank you to our parents who always understood when the answer to that famous question was, "No, I'm not done yet. Pick me up in an hour... or two." We appreciate our dogs Rudy, Taffy and Whippet for their understanding when dinner was late.

"Why were we so involved? Why did we get into this?" Frankly, we still don't know the answer. But we do know that personal satisfaction and accomplishment were factors in our work. We took pride in our school and through the yearbook we have shown others the individuality, spirit and unity that was abundant.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Only through the joint efforts of many people was the publication of the 1981 Troubadour made possible.

The theme ONE SINGULAR SENSATION was contributed by Ann Howells and voted on by the staff. The logo design of top hat and cane used to carry the theme throughout the book was designed by Maria Ramirez. Desiree Tuleneres designed the cover.

425 books were published by Jostens/American Yearbook Company with the patient guidance of our representative Mr. David Sorenson.

The copy was printed in various sizes of Avante Garde type style on white shadow weave paper.

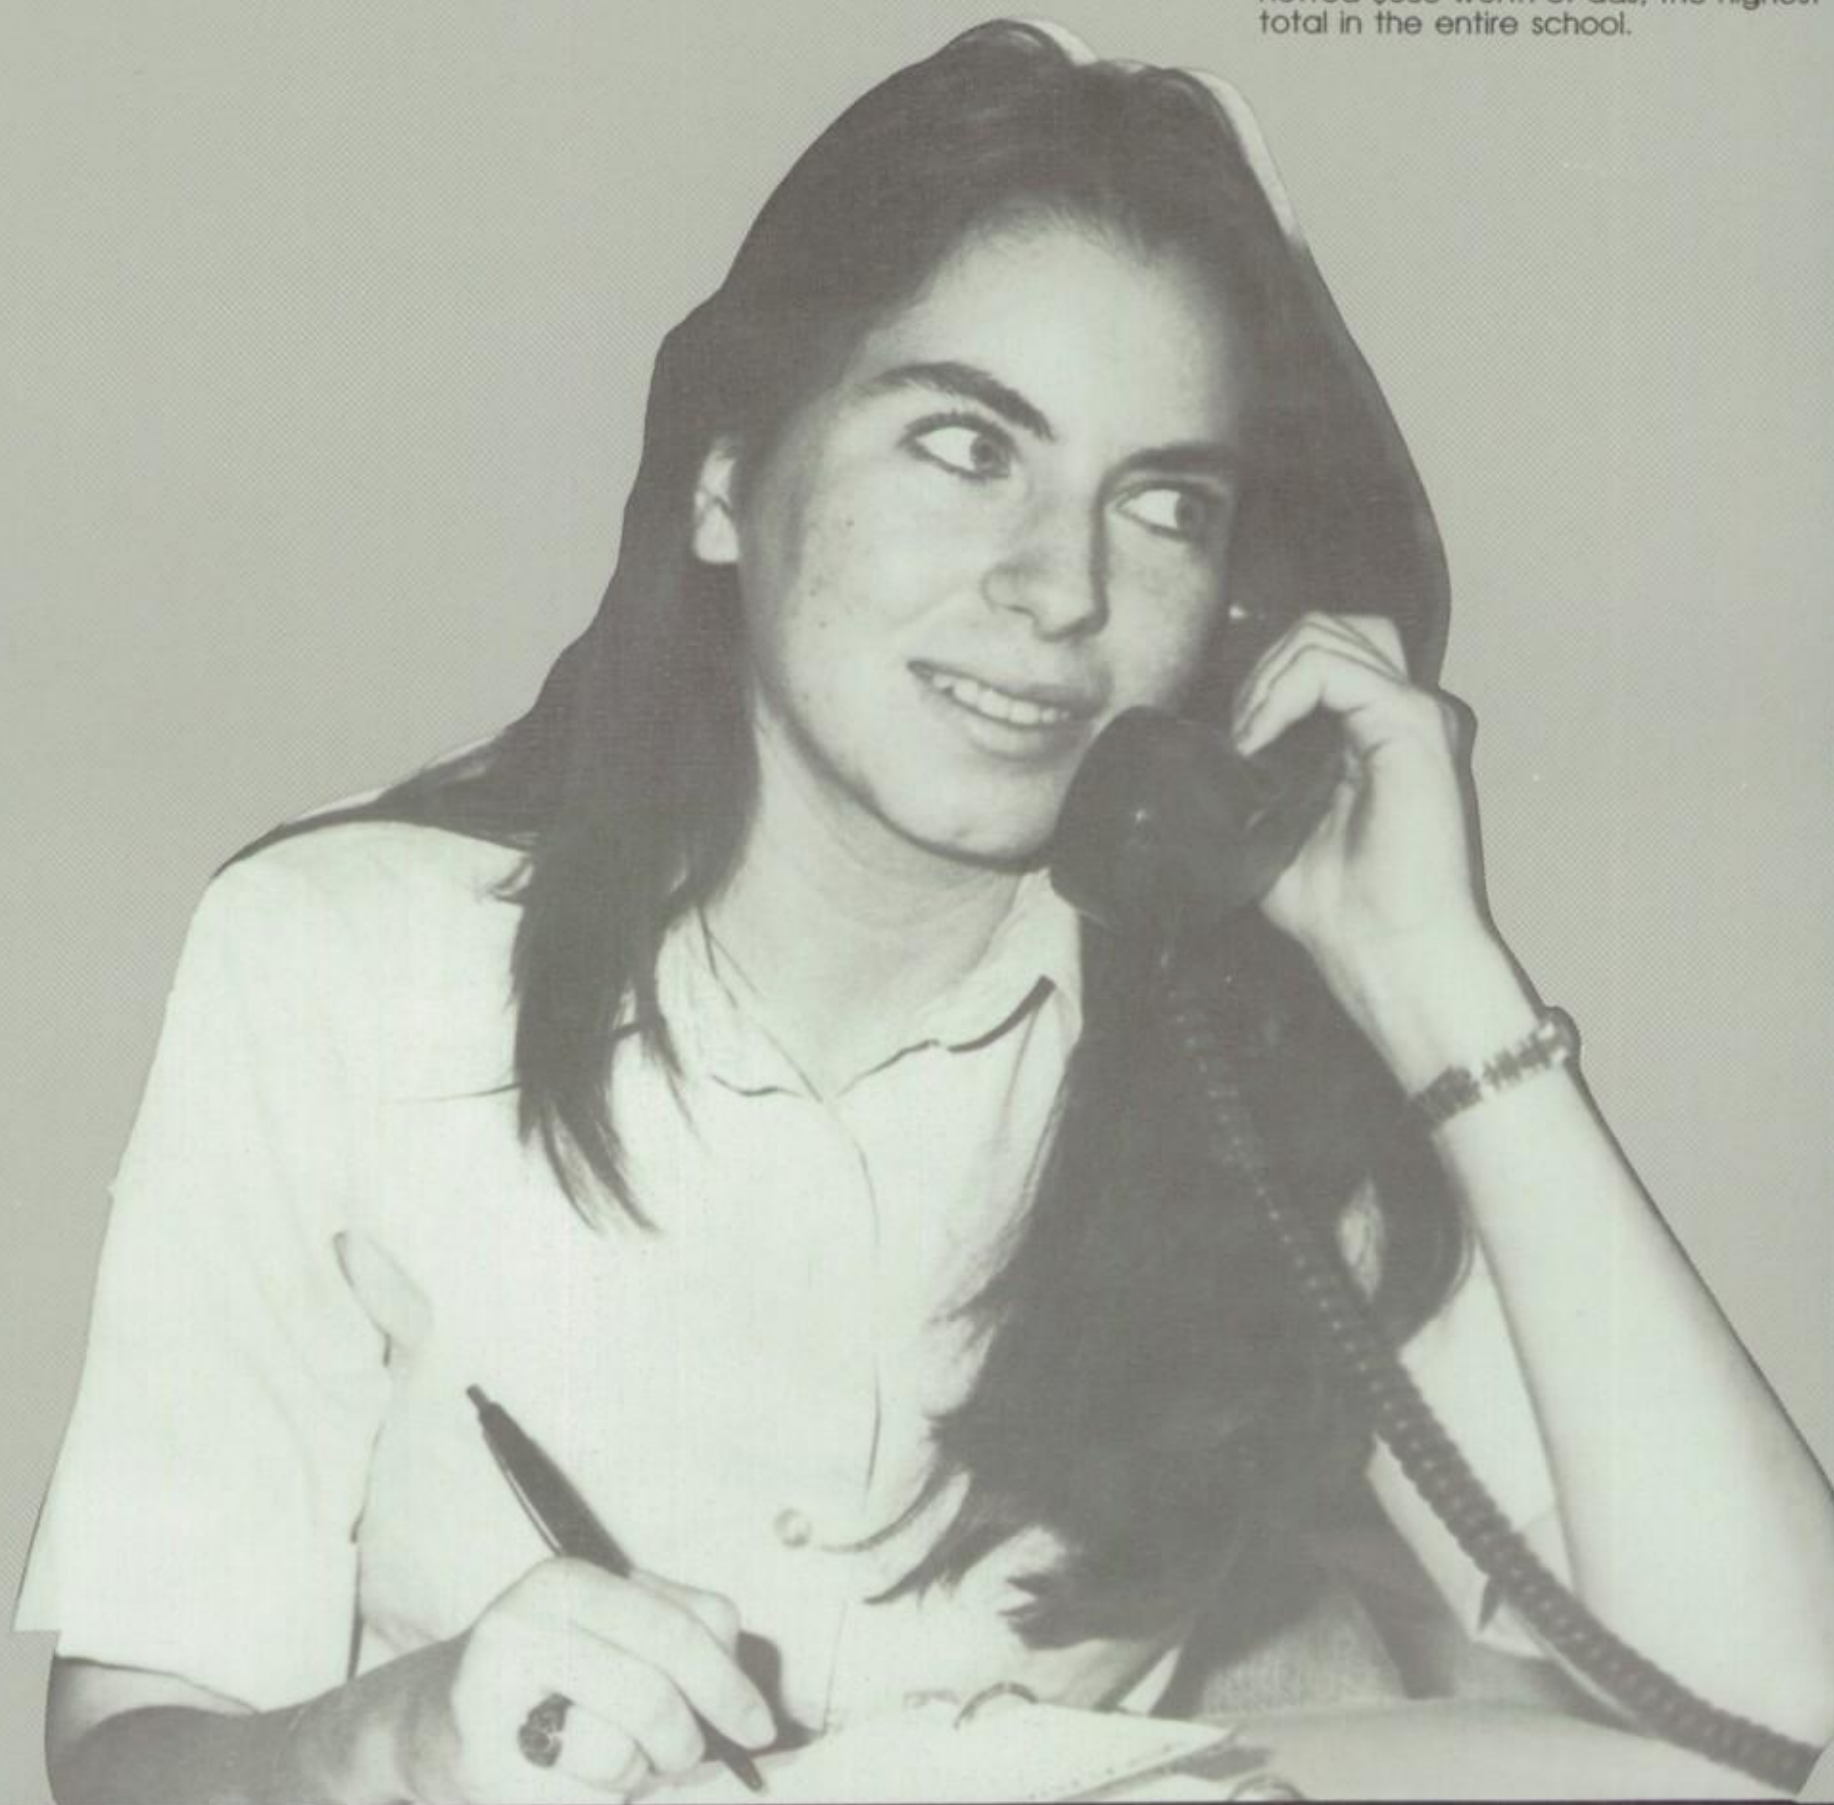

Special thanks to Mr. Bill Christy and everyone at the Portrait Gallery for the senior portrait photography and the pictures used in the yearbook.

▲ Margie Gear greedily counts the money made through a successful yearbook ad campaign.

◆ Cathy Feeney is obviously pleased with herself as she receives an ad from Pantorium Cleaners.

The Troubadour staff enthusiastically started the year with a new way to finance the yearbook: selling ads. Through careful planning and much determination, the staff drew up contracts and refined selling tactics. After a successful staff ad campaign, the ad and traditional patron drive were extended to the student body.

As an incentive for students to sell ads and patrons, the Troubadour staff offered prizes ranging from tickets to the play "A Chorus Line" to gift certificates at Music Plus and Santa Anita Mall. Free yearbooks went to those who sold at least $50 worth of ads.

The campaign was a sensational one. Through the cooperation of the students, the staff netted over $7000. The money brought in helped to fund the changes and exciting new ideas planned for the 1981 Troubadour.

ADVERTISERS and PATRONS of the Troubadour are an important part of the yearbook. Through their support, students are able to buy their books at a reduced price. Their contributions also make possible many added features that enhance the quality of the yearbook.

A heart felt thank-you is extended to all of the following businesses, groups, families and individuals:

Tothe Senior Class!Goodluck with the college men your future and love

To the Seniors:

All four years, day in, day out,
I've spent my time with you.
New friendships I've made, old ones
I've saved,
Some have been quite new.
Freshmen year, when we first met,
We didn't know everything well.
Our Big Sisters, as we are now,
Helped pick up our troubles that fell.
Now we are Seniors, with sisters our own
And memories close behind.
We've all grown together, as one family:
Like unicorns we are one kind.
As we all move on to things ahead,
I say good luck to you!
I wish I'd never have to say
Good-bye to all of you.
Thanks. Keep in touch, .

I'd like to be the sort of friend that you have been to
me;
I'd like to be the help that you've always been glad to be;
I'd like to mean as much to you each minute of the day
As you have meant, old friend of mine, to me along the way.
I'd like to give you back the joy that you have given

me,
Yet that were wishing you a need I hope will never be.
I'd like to make you feel as rich as I, who travel on Undaunted in the darkest hours with you to lean upon.
And could I have one wish this year, this only would it
be;
I'd like to be the sort of friend that you have been to
me.

One Singular Sensation!

Dear Staff, Thanks for:

Counting all those picas.

Re-writing...re-writing...re-writing...

Keeping those internal margins consistent!

"Scary monsters" and the "crusty" morale that kept things...lively?
SNSATNL

Getting hungry at the right times.

Riding in the back of a cold, crowded pick-up to...Visalia?!

Your patience and laughter and enthusiasm.

Taking the time.

Susan,
 Hi! Well
 its been one long school year. I'm so glad we are still friends
 because you are very sweet
 The play was pretty fun. Don't you think. And I can't wait till this summer it is going to be so radical I hope. I know you'll have fun with Steve. You should have gone for that romantic do it many times today. But oh well I'm sure you will been fun this year in the summer. And hasn't Biology been fun with that babe of a teacher. Well I hope we stay good friends forever.
 And don't party to much. this summer (Just kidding)? Live it up Kid you only live once. Live always.

It seems like such a shame that it took us untill the end of this year to realize that we are friends. O well. So now we're juniors and I hope we continue to be the friends we are. I really think its humorous about Dan & Bill. HAHAHA. Maybe not. I cannot believe that you were physically able to drive home from our wild beach parties. or should I say mazda party? No, maybe not. Sue, can I ask you a question? Will the sun rise tomorrow? Its too bad she's gone now. She was alot of fun. O well no one lasts forever. Don't I know it? Well, it was fun at the prom. I wish ya were there. But at least you got to the "post-prom-party". Please do explain what Bill is getting paid for on page 97. Or is he paying the chick? I no understand. Its too bad that you weren't in Reginds English with me. It was just too much fun. At least we had Biology together. That was mui grande. Just mui. Hedgman (Paul; to those of us who kiss-up) wears his pants too tight. He turns me on — moan, groan — ah hum. O boy what a tan dude. what a peice of meat. well, the messes we got ourselves in are over. Thank god. Parents can really get on my case, ya know? I know. O.K. — yeah. Well. you're a real pal. Please stay close. Keep in touch. Have one Helluva summer. Don't burn out, have mike & stoves body all to yourself, and keep that jeep in one peice.

love ya lots,

P.S. Don't be a stranger. But I know you wouldn't do that.

Pammie.

susan,
 Hope you have a great summer!
 I'm really glad we have gotten to know each other better. Just think no more sr. Regina in 2 weeks!
 Now that one thing could make your summer great. We'll have to have some more beach parties the next time with a few more people and alot more wood. Well anyway
 see ya later LUU
 Tammy

~~Susan~~, (How quant)

Well, well, well
 Another shitty year. Too
 we didn't ^{have} Regina the 2nd
 but that's cool. Have a bitch

 TO SEE YA THIS SUMMER
 MAYBE AT A PARTY OR WE GO TO THE BEACH! HAVE FUN
 AT NAUTALIST AND HAVE A GOOD SEX FOR ME - TAKE ME
 EASY

Sue,
 hope next year will be better than this year was but I doubt it!
 hope next year we will be better from dates
 than we did Cherry Blossom fest! Someone better have party after the prom next year so there will be something to look forward to. we will have to get together with group of people over the summer. Well, stay a sweet you are over the summer and don't change (only for the better) no hunk, punky, if you know what I mean.

Love ya

Holly

Well the year was finally over and we are big juniors (yah!)
 hope you have a good summer and that you will have a great future
 Great friends
 and love
 (you horn dog!)

Love ya lots,
 Laura ♡
 (you horn dog!)

dear sue, i think this year we have become closer than ever! of course, we have our differences here and there and duke it out every now and then but i think it only strengthens our relationship and makes us realize how much we really have and how much there is to lose. i know relationships mean a great deal to you so i wouldn't ever want you to give up having alot of friends. let us though be special unto anyone else because of deep secrets and neat stuff like that! i'll pay that some of your homyness rubs off on me (mike would like that) because maybe i'll come to understand what true love is. Our friendship is a great example of what friends are supposed to be!

It's been fun.
 Love Jennifer
 I am really not going next year. But I will miss you in Spanish and Biology
 "Se habla" next year. Don't get kill you. Beautiful! Try Mrs. R. Beautiful! Try who loved me and have a much. Summer
 Ruth so great cave full
